Roosevelt Slashes CCC, NYA Funds Nearly 75%

President's Budget Aims at Limiting Both Agencies to Wartime Activities

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday told Congress to cut appropriations for the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration nearly 75 per cent below current appropriations and "definitely" to restrict those agencies to "wartime activities."

To the House Appropriations Committee the President recommended 1943 appropriations totaling $102,150,000 as contrasted with the $389,727,000 provided for the agencies during the fiscal year ending June 30, and the 150 million Mr. Roosevelt estimated for youth aid in his budget message last January.

Student Aid Program Omitted.

The President's budget for the two agencies, which have been among the chief targets of Congressional economy advocates, would require the CCC to scale down the number of its camps from a present total of 800 to 150 by early fall.

As for NYA, no mention was made of that agency's student-aid program, for which Congress last year appropriated $85,984,000 for assistance and $5,700,000 for administrative expenses.

NYA officials said the present expectation is that the student-aid phase of their program, which has provided part-time employment for thousands of needy youths in high schools and colleges, will be abandoned "for the duration."

Approval Recommended

The President's message recommended that NYA be given $49,729,000 for the training of 400,000 men and women for employment in war industries. Mr. Roosevelt indicated that NYA's part in the program is slated to be restricted chiefly to administrative functions.

Projects for training unemployed youth between 17 and 24 years of age in "resident and nonresident" workshops should be approved by his new War Man Power Commission, headed by Federal Security

Our New Army

CHAPTER II

A Southeastern Training Base, May 4.—In the story of two infantry divisions now training here side by side, hard, competent and sure of themselves, is the story of all the Army in the last 18 months of making ready for war.

Theirs is the story of transition from one state of mind to another and from one state of being to another. It reveals how they have got the feel of themselves, how they have made themselves strong and capable and proud and how they have given a great deal more to their country's Army than the 30,000 fighting men now in their ranks.

Their Thinking Is for Victory

In their 18 months of training these two divisions, the veteran First and the Thirty-sixth from the Texas National Guard, have shifted with the country from thinking defense to thinking victory.

They have grown from scattered regiments in the one case and from half-trained civilians in the other to closely knit military machines, professional in appearance and thought and performance.

They have trained not only themselves but hundreds of officers and noncommissioned officers and soldiers now serving in other units and other places training still other thousands.

A Constant Process of Dilution

Above all, these two divisions are visible evidence of the continuing process of dilution through which the little peacetime Army has gone on growing into a great fighting machine while keeping itself ready to do battle at the drop of a hat if need be. Time and again both divisions have reached war strength, trained and ready, and have given their veterans away to train new troops or to be made into officers, while they have absorbed new batches of raw men themselves and converted them into soldiers hard and fit and cocky and steeped in their own rich traditions.

Throughout the Army, veterans of the First and Thirty-sixth have taken their places alongside those of all the other old divisions, each the nucleus of a new squad, a new platoon, a new headquarters, and each instilling in the new organization the spirit and know-how of the old. They understand, these two divisions, the grave responsibility their skill in the soldier's

'On Several Fronts'

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 4.—For the first time in recent weeks the Russians announced officially tonight that Soviet troops "waged offensive battles on several sectors of the front during the day," indicating the Red army might have gotten the jump on the Germans and launched their own spring drive.

The midnight Soviet communique said the day's thrusts improved Soviet positions along the front.

This was the first positive official statement of Soviet gains since the announcements lapsed into brief assertions of "no substantial changes at the front."

Follows Predictions

For the last several days the Russian press has predicted that when a spring offensive starts it will be by the Red army and not by Hitler. The Fuehrer's plans for such a drive—already far behind his schedule on other European fronts heretofore—have been described here and at Kuibyshev as converted into myth.

The communique listed 264 German planes destroyed from April 26 to May 2, with Soviet losses given as 71 craft.

Meanwhile the people of the Ukraine were urged by Marshal Semeon Timoshenko to engage in guerilla warfare behind the German lines and so prepare the way for a Red army of liberation.

"Help us with everything possible," read a proclamation. "Together with guerillas we will crush the German occupants."

Copies Behind Nazi Lines

This could best be done, the marshal's proclamation noted, by blowing up bridges, by preventing the Germans from carrying away material and man power, by breaking down the German communications, and by watching the direction of the enemy's flight and attacking the Germans from the rear.

"At the approach of detachments of the Red army show them the safe routes for offensive," the proclamation said, and added that the inhabitants should remember where the Germans had placed mines and warn the Red army of their

400 Items Affected

By Alfred Friendly

The War Production Board last night ordered the virtual elimination of steel from civilian life, banning its inclusion in 400 major commodities comprising thousands of items in everyday consumer use.

The long-anticipated order was issued to conserve iron and steel for war purposes and for those few civilian uses that contribute directly to the war effort or are essential to the survival of the national economy.

The sweeping order was seen as the finishing blow to America's Steel Age pride, the consumers durable goods industries. The WPB has decreed that these must be choked off, regardless of the effect on thousands of manufacturers and dealers, and tens of millions of consumers.

The order bans the use of steel in a list of goods ranging from amusement park roller coasters, stadiums and silos to asparagus

Japs Pushing Up Burma Road Only 25 Miles From Yunnan

Chiang, Seeing War Prolonged, Calls for Chinese to Give All

By the Associated Press

Chungking, May 4.—With China's Burma Road lifeline choked off and a Japanese column within 25 miles of China's frontier, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek told his people tonight "we must prepare for a prolongation of the war and for greater difficulties in the future."

China's national mobilization act comes into effect tomorrow and the generalissimo asked the Chinese people to restrict consumption, intensify production and place all their resources of labor, skill and knowledge at the disposal of the nation.

Troops Fighting Hard

Chiang broadcast his appeal to the people as three powerful Japanese columns pushing through Burma threatened to invade both India and China. The Japanese were within 150 miles of India.

The enemy had advanced 60 miles up the Burma Road from Lashio to smash at Chinese positions near Kutkai, but the scantily equipped forces commanded by Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell fought them fiercely through the night, a communique said.

Kutkai is within 25 miles of an appendage of Yunnan Province, which juts into Burma, but is about 40 miles from China via the Burma Road. A Japanese column which attempted to flank the Chinese positions was reported repulsed in the bitter engagement.

Second Chinese Column Repulsed

A second Japanese column was pushing other Chinese slowly north along the Irrawaddy River beyond ruined Mandalay, probably driving toward Bhamo, 110 miles away. Bhamo is an alternate terminus of the Burma Road and the northernmost navigation point on the river.

Corregidor Has 13 Raids For Third Day

U. S. Gunboat Sunk; Our Troops Battle New Landing on Mindanao

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Stepping up the furious assaults on embattled Corregidor, Japan has launched 39 separate bombing attacks on the island fortress in the past three days and has sunk the 560-ton river gunboat Mindanao.

Light and heavy enemy bombers came over the "Rock" 13 times yesterday and loosed their deadly cargo, the third day running that an even 13 air attacks have been launched on the citadel.

The War Department communique announcing the aerial assaults did not indicate the extent of damage done, but the Navy announced the sinking of the gunboat during the Corregidor air raids of the past few days.

There were no casualties among the crew of the 198-foot vessel, the Navy communique said. Normally, the Mindanao carried a complement of about 80.

Loss of the 14-year-old gunboat brought the total of United States naval vessels lost during the war from all causes to 32. Five have been destroyed in Manila Bay.

Jap Guns Pound Forts

Coupled with yesterday's heavy bombing attacks was a continuous five-hour pounding of the Manila Bay forts by Japanese siege guns from the shores of Bataan and Cavite.

Corregidor received the bulk of the fire of 240-millimeter shells, the War Department said, making it evident that the Japs are sparing no effort to crumble the citadel's defenses.

As long as that stalwart fortress holds, Japan is cheated of one of the important fruits of her conquest of

Roosevelt Warns Vichy Against War On English

Would Involve All Allies, Note Declares; Island to Be Held In Trust for France

By the Associated Press

The British, stealing a march on the Japanese, have occupied the great island of Madagascar athwart vital Allied supply lines in the Indian Ocean, and the United States served formal notice last night that, if necessary, American forces will help defend it against all comers.

The move, announced here and in London, marked a perhaps historic change in a march of events which has seen the Axis get the jump, in virtually all other instances, on its foes.

A formal statement from the State Department declared that the coup by the British had the "full approval and support of the United States," since there was definite danger that Axis powers, especially Japan, would seize the island.

Vichy Bluntly Warned

Bluntly, the statement warned the Vichy regime of France not to permit any warlike act against the occupying forces.

After stating that the island would be held in trust for France, it said that "any warlike act permitted by the French government against the government of Great Britain or the Government of the United States would, of necessity, have to be regarded by the Government of the United States as an attack upon the United Nations as a whole."

At another point the statement said that "the Government of the United States is at war with the Axis powers and if it becomes necessary or desirable for American troops or ships to use Madagascar in the common cause, the United States will not hesitate to do so at any time."

Jap Mission Reported There

While a communique issued in London said merely that a combined British naval and military force had arrived off the island at dawn this morning, the State Department went further and said President Roosevelt had received word that the occupation actually had taken place.

There had been considerable speculation over the reported presence of a Japanese military mission in the island, fourth largest in the world. In the past, Japanese missions have sometimes been the precursors of invasion.

"Gesture of Courtesy"

Lying in the Indian Ocean opposite Portuguese Mozambique on the African east coast and sheltering the 250-mile wide Mozambique Channel, Madagascar stands near the cape route sea lanes to all the Indian Ocean ports.

Thus, in enemy hands, it would be a possibly fatal menace to the eastward movement of troops and material to Australia, India, all the Middle East, and even Russia; and it would be an offensive threat to

Social Justice Quits; Sedition Probe to Go On

No Defense Offered For Coughlin Weekly At Postal Hearing

By Dillard Stokes

The Social Justice sedition investigation will be pursued in the courts until the last guilty man has been dealt with.

The magazine—called "clearly seditious" by Attorney General Biddle—gave up its right to go through the mails without a fight yesterday and said publication was being suspended.

But high officials of the Department of Justice declared this apparent surrender would not retard the probe now being conducted by the special grand jury on Axis agents in Washington.

This inquiry was part of a Nation-wide drive, ordered by Attorney General Biddle against the vermin press—which plays the Nazi propaganda game under the cloak of the bill of rights. Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney, Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U. S. N., and John T. M. Reddan will resume grilling Social Justice witnesses on Friday.

Plane Gadget Maker Blames War Officials

OPM Refused to Grant Dzus Blanket Priority, His Lawyer Asserts

An immigrant inventor and his attorney yesterday told the Senate Patents Committee that indifference on the part of officials responsible for war industries expansion, coupled with materials scarcity, was responsible for shortages in production of a "dinky little gadget" and resultant serious delays in American warplane manufacture.

Nearly two weeks ago the same committee was told by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold that refusal of the inventor, William Dzus, a native of the Ukraine, to license other manufacturers to turn out his patented metal fastener was responsible, in the main, for work stoppages and delays in five airplane factories.

The committee was given to understand from statements read by Arnold that the Dzus fastener, a hollow, screw-like device, was specified by the Army and Navy, that its use was essential to efficient attachment of motor cowlings and other removable airplane parts.

Daniel H. Kane, attorney for the Dzus Fastener Co., Babylon, Long Island, declared that the Army and Navy will approve fasteners made by other manufacturers "as of today."

Kane told the committee that Dzus used his own capital in expansion

Rush Exceeds Expectations

Lack of Volunteers Delays D. C. Registration for Sugar

Washington's first rationing registration hit a snag yesterday as volunteer registration helpers failed to show up in proportion to the number of consumers who turned out for their sugar ration books. A total of 163,018 citizens filed applications and 149,680 books were issued, according to Lawson J. Cantrell, District rationing supervisor.

The 13,338 persons who registered but did not get books admitted having more than the maximum amount permissible under the Office of Price Administration's decree, and their applications temporarily were denied. When their sugar stocks have dropped below the six-pound limit, they may receive their books by applying to their local rationing board.

Cantrell said that an estimated 25 per cent of the persons who had volunteered to assist in the registration failed to report for work. At some registration points, he said, the number rose to as high as 50 per cent.

Cantrell insisted, however, that not more than 3000 persons in the entire District were turned away. He said also that in each case where applicants were turned away, they were told they could return tonight and be registered, or even tomorrow night if they had already made plans for tonight.

To take care of the added burden and to insure completion of the District registration by Thursday night

Allen Wins Pulitzer Prize; AP Reporter With British Fleet

New York, May 4.—Larry Allen's graphic Associated Press stories from warships of the British Mediterranean fleet won him a Pulitzer prize in international reporting today but Allen wasn't around to hear about it—he was back with the Mediterranean fleet.

The 33-year-old foreign correspondent was awarded the coveted $500 journalism award "for a distinguished example of telegraphic reporting of international affairs published in daily newspapers in the United States."

Allen, a native of Mount Savage, Md., whose full name is Laurence Edmund Allen, made some 70 trips with the British fleet and survived the sinking of the British light cruiser Galatea December 16, 1941, despite his inability to swim. He returned to the Middle East only recently after a brief vacation in this country.

Pulitzer awards in other fields of journalism and letters for 1941, announced by the trustees of Columbia University on recommendation of the advisory board of the graduate school of journalism, follow:

Margaret Leech's "Reveille in Washington," describing the life of the Nation's Capital during the Civil War, won a $500 prize for a distinguished book of the year upon the history of the United States.

4000 Queries Answered

New Information Center Does Rush Business on Opening Day

The new United States Information Center opposite Post Square opened for business yesterday and took care of the queries of some 2500 callers, between 8:30 a. m. and 10 p. m. according to official estimate.

In addition there were more than 1500 telephone calls, which was above the average received by the United States Information Service in its old headquarters at 1405 G Street Northwest.

Don Mason, assistant USIS chief, who showed reporters through the building, said most of the inquiries were "of directive and functional nature." Callers sought information on a variety of subjects ranging from employment to Government contracts, and Mason said most of them were handled satisfactorily.

The Defense Housing Registry, which moved into the new building from its prefabricated house on the other side of Fourteenth Street, did its usual rushing business with home and lodging seekers. Also reporting a good day's work were the Marine Corps and Coast Guard Recruiting Stations which accepted 30 Marines and 20 Coast Guard recruits.

The Center is to remain open each evening until 10 o'clock, Mason said, and will try to solve the problems of every caller with a legitimate mission.

Japs Leave Markham Valley Again, Lose Four Planes Over Port Moresby

Allied Bombs Hit Transports At Rabaul

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 4.—A second incursion of the Japanese up the Markham Valley beyond the New Guinea Mountains protecting Port Moresby again has ended in a withdrawal, Australian dispatches reported today.

The withdrawal occurred less than 24 hours after it was learned that a sizable force had marched up the valley to Nadzab, 27 miles in the interior. Apparently the expedition was for reconnaissance purposes, for no contact with regular Australian or American forces was reported.

Australian bushwhackers operating as guerillas in the area were not believed in sufficient number to have forced the retirement, if the Japanese purpose was to establish fields for the dispersal of their aircraft from the coastal airports hammered almost daily by Allied bombers.

A second Japanese column which had advanced southward kept its position 17 miles south of Salamaua on the coast, however.

Here the Japanese were separated from Port Moresby by 165 miles of jungle and mountains 13000 feet high. Port Moresby is the key to Shallow Torres Strait, across which the Japanese would have to move for an invasion of Australia from New Guinea.

The Japanese, led by German missionaries, made their first penetration up the Markham Valley to Nadzab soon after they had seized the New Guinea ports of Lae, Salamaua and Finschhafen, but late in March they were forced back to their landing points by floods which swept the valley.

The invaders continued to send heavy bombing expeditions against Port Moresby. An Allied communique early today said 12 bombers and eight fighters attacked the base Sunday, but the defenders, in a "brilliant" action, shot down four of them.

In offensive action, the communique said, Allied airmen scored hits on a Japanese transport, damaged two more and capsized a tender at Rabual in two raids Saturday, and shot up a huge four-engined flying boat in a 35-minute battle at Bougainville in the Solomon Islands.

British Vessel Sunk by Sub On Maiden Trip

Miami, Fla., May 4.—Survivors of a medium-sized British freighter, sunk on her maiden voyage by an Axis submarine prowling in the Atlantic have landed at widely separated points with United States naval planes playing an important part in the rescue.

Twenty-four of the 44 men picked up by naval aircraft which landed 8 at Bermuda and 16 at Banana River Naval Air Base in Florida. A passing ship took eight to Cuba, from where they came to Miami en route to New York. The remaining 12 were reported at Charleston, S. C.

One of the men was described as "a passenger who is a servant of the British government." No lives were lost and no one was injured in the sinking, which Seventh Naval District Headquarters announced today. Capt. Harold Richardson of Scarborough, Yorkshire, was in command of the ship.

The Coast Guard announced today that fishing boats in the Miami-Miami Beach area had been ordered to remain in port.

No explanation for the order was given, and there was no word about how long the ban would continue. A similar order last February kept small craft in the harbor for about 48 hours.

Sixth Brazilian Ship Sunk

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, May 4 (AP). The Brazilian freighter Parnahyba has been torpedoed and sunk near the Island of Trinidad and a Spanish liner has picked up one lifeboat with 23 survivors, it was announced officially today. The Parnahyba was the sixth vessel lost by Brazil, apparently by Axis action, in three months.

Two lifeboats with an undetermined number of men aboard are missing.

The Parnahyba, 6692 tons, was sunk May 1 while bound for New York, the official announcement said.

The Spanish vessel Cabo de Hornos, which made the rescue, searched the vicinity fruitlessly for the missing men.

The 23 survivors, including Capt. Raul Francisco Diegoli, were reported well.

Luzon—the use of strategic Manila Bay as a naval base.

The War Department also announced that enemy troops had made another invasion of the Island of Mindanoa, putting some 4000 to 5000 troops ashore near Tagoloan on the northern coast of the southern island.

Advance Stubbornly Resisted

No details were given but the communique declared tersely:

"The enemy advance from the landing points is being stubbornly resisted by our troops."

This is the fourth invasion of the island launched by the Japanese. Troops have been put ashore along the Gulf of Davao, at the tip of Zamboango Province and near Cotabato and Parang on Illana Bay.

The Japs have control of small coastal areas there, but are frequently raided by American-Filipino troops who still hold the rest of the island.

The gunboat Mindanao was built in Shanghai in 1928, one of a series of light-draft vessels designed for use in the Yangtze River and in Chinese coastal waters by American naval patrols. She was armed with two 3-inch guns.

Officer Awarded Medal

Earlier in the day, the War Department received from Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright the citation given to Lieut. Robert F. Augur of Portland, Oreg., in connection with the award to him last week of the Distinguished Service Cross for valor in the Philippines.

The award, it was disclosed, was for "extraordinary heroism during a very heavy bombardment of the island defenses of Manila Bay." Disregarding his own safety, Lieut. Augur left his shelter and rescued wounded men and put out fires. His citation follows:

"During particularly heavy shelling, several projectiles from enemy artillery landed near Lieutenant Augur's unit. Several men were wounded and a number of fires were started. Voluntarily and without hesitation, Lieutenant Augur dashed from his shelter while the heavy shelling was in progress. He succeeded in moving the wounded to covered positions and then extinguished the fires. The unselfish courage of this intrepid officer in the face of terrific hazards resulted in saving the lives of several of his men.

Some fighting was in progress in the Monywa area of the Chindwin River Valley, some 60 miles west of Mandalay. It was this force that appeared to be nearest to India.

A resurgence of Allied air power in the Burma theater, where Japanese fliers have ruled the skies, brought one ray of hope to the dark picture of disaster.

United States headquarters in India announced that multimotored United States bombers raided Rangoon, chief supply base of the enemy, last night, causing a large explosion and fire in the center of the docks.

The British reported that they followed up today with Blenheim bombers blasting barges of Japanese advancing up the Chindwin River. The British said they scored direct hits, despite heavy ground fire, and came through the attack unscathed.

The main Japanese push was directed up the Burma Road and possibly was headed toward Chungking, 700 miles away, but the high mountains and deep gorges that intervened made the Chinese capital appear safe for the time being.

The thrust threatening India was directed northwest up the Chindwin River Valley against the tired and thinning ranks of Alexander's army.

Far south of the present battle zones, Chinese forces still were fighting at Taunggyi. These Chinese are well experienced in the art of fading into the jungle hills and conducting costly guerilla warfare.

Cash Expenditure On Arms Exceeds World War's Cost

Fiscal officials disclosed yesterday that the United States already has paid out in cash for this war as much as it spent during World War I.

The cost of the first World War to the United States from 1917 until the peace treaty was ratified in 1921 was $25,729,000,000, including loans to the Allies.

Since July 1, 1940, when this country started preparing for the present conflict, the Government has paid out approximately 26 billion dollars for war purposes. The Treasury paid out $24,509,000,000 and the RFC and other corporations doing defense work spent about $1,500,000,000 cash.

With spending running over three billion dollars a month, moreover, it won't be long before costs of World War II exceed the aggregate cost of the last war, including expenditures not only up to the peace treaty but also for pensions, compensation, bonuses and other purposes since. Counting extras, the first World War cost about 45 billion dollars.

Publishers Appeal On Delivery Order

New York, May 4 (AP).—The American Newspaper Publishers Association today filed a petition with Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, for modification of the Government's motor vehicle delivery order which would allow only one edition per day to be delivered by truck and bring about other sharp curtailments in service.

In an accompanying statement Cranston Williams, A. N. P. A. general manager, said: "There is no question about the willingness of American daily newspapers to cooperate in conserving trucks, tires and gasoline but the drastic provisions of this order to go into effect May 15 would curtail reading matter for the American people at a time when other Government officials in Washington are recognizing by priority orders and other actions that supplies are essential for newspapers to continue to print during the war emergency."

Nazis Claim 7 Ships Sunk in Arctic Battle

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), May 4 (AP).—In an Arctic Ocean battle which lasted several days despite "stormy weather and heavy seas," German surface and undersea warships and bombers sank a 10,000-ton cruiser and six freighters totaling 37,500 tons from a convoy, the German communique declared today.

The German radio, quoting high command sources, said British naval forces which included two battleships, an aircraft carrier and several destroyers were protecting the convoy (presumably bound for Russia), but the communique described the armed protective vessels only as "strong fighting units."

"A German destroyer flotilla accepted battle with a superior force of enemy destroyers of the escort" at one stage of the engagement, the high command said, "and damaged several enemy destroyers. One German destroyer suffered serious damage."

In addition to six freighters sunk, two were damaged by torpedoes and bombs, the communique added.

Submarines scored two torpedo hits on the heavy cruiser, which stopped and later sank, and undersea craft also sank an ammunition ship of 6500 tons, the communique said.

Two steamers totaling 12,000 tons reported sunk by destroyers and three totaling 19,000 tons by bombers completed the high command's score.

The proclamation was printed in a newspaper of which more than 15 million copies have been distributed behind the lines in the nine months of the paper's existance.

Rivers, swollen by the spring thaw, were delaying offensive operations in some sectors. The River Don, usually a mile wide, was said to be 30 miles across in some locations.

In the north, however, the Soviet information bureau reported another 2000 German officers and men have been killed on the Leningrad front.

(The Berlin radio confirmed action on this front and said the Germans had made "successful" local attacks there.)

In a supplement to today's midday communique, the Russians claimed Yugoslav guerillas had surrounded an Italian infantry unit in Yugoslavia, killed 200 men in a two-day attack and had taken many prisoners and equipment.

R.A.F. Pounds Bases to Block U-Boat Drive

By the Associated Press

London, May 4.—The Royal Air Force hurled bombs upon three strongholds of German naval might today in a sudden and sharp offensive against the Nazi U-boat fleet massing at its bases for the summer campaign on North Atlantic sea lanes.

Swinging out over a 900-mile front in predawn attacks, the R. A. F. blasted at Hamburg, great German port; St. Nazaire, in occupied France, from which U-boats are sent to prowl the United States eastern coast, and at Kristiansand, at the southern tip of Norway, from which submarines sally forth to raid the northern supply route to Russia.

In swift, daylight follow-up of these powerful attacks, Boston (Douglas) bombers protected by R. A. F. fighters made an intense raid on Le Havre, in occupied France, another base for German naval operations.

Losses Equal for Day

British fighters engaged German aircraft in sky battles and shot down seven enemy planes, an air ministry communique said.

Seven British fighters are missing in the day's operations. The air ministry also revealed that a British bomber shot down a German fighter during the attack on Hamburg last night.

The Germans made short but sharp air attacks on two south coast areas tonight, causing considerable damage. A number of casualties was feared. Watchers said at least three raiders were shot down.

Despite bad weather over Germany, Hamburg was bombed in what one source called "considerable weight." Pilots said they saw large fires in docks and shipyards as they left.

Bomber crews participating in the Kristiansand attack watched bombs exploding in barracks, ships and what probably was an ammunition dump. Six fires were visible for 50 miles. The island of Oderoen also was attacked. Targets at St. Nazaire were set afire.

The R. A. F. lost five aircraft in those early raids, but British anti-aircraft guns and night fighters defending the home territory accounted for five of about 30 German bombers which attacked Exeter.

"Fly cops," which waylay returning German planes, shot down two more night raiders as they winged home to their bases in northern France.

Exeter Hit Hard

The Germans gave Exeter a heavy bombing, and the city suffered considerable damage and casualties. During the day a town on the southwest coast was bombed and machine-gunned.

(The German high command stated that Hastings, another historic British city, had been bombed Sunday, this in apparent continuation of the "Baedeker raids" against centers of British tradition.)

The German losses for the last two weeks were 35 planes for certain and air force sources said probably 10 more crashed before landing.

"The German air force losses are around 15 per cent," one air source said. "It is difficult to see how raiding can be maintained at this rate of loss unless Reichsmarshal Goering shifts bombers from the Mediterranean, Libyan or Russian fronts to strengthen the bomber squadrons of Marshal Sperrle's third air fleet in western Europe."

Despite the much greater distance that British raiders have to fly the R. A. F. bomber losses were estimated by informed sources at less than 5 per cent, a rate Britain is well able to stand.

The German air strength in the west is about 600 fighters and 300 bombers. This is estimated at one-sixth the total operational strength and one-ninth of the bombing strength. A large proportion of these bombers is employed as mine-layers now.

It was pointed out that though the number might seem small, it represented only first-line strength in squadron service. For each German machine in operational squadrons there must be at least five more in reserve and in use for training, transport and communications.

Stark Expects End Soon to Sub Peril

Devices Perfected, He Says, Predicting Offensive Shortly

By the United Press

London, May 4.—Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of United States naval forces in European waters, said today that the U-boat menace in the Atlantic is being slowly but surely dealt with by new antisubmarine devices and a burst of American shipbuilding that has produced two new merchantmen a day for a month and will produce 100 new warships this year.

Stark said the U-boat situation was expected to be under control soon and that it was hoped that the Allied navies would be in position before long to strike out offensively under the principle of "calculated risk."

He gave no details of the antisubmarine devices, but stressed the shipbuilding phase of the campaign. He said 30 new warships were launched last year and that the 100 new units to be added this year would be exceeded in the 1943 program.

American shipyards set a new ship construction record in April, completing and delivering 36 of 51 merchant vessels launched during the month, the United States Maritime Commission announced in Washington today.

(The Maritime Commission said this brought to 106 the number of merchant ships placed in war service of the United Nations during the first four months of 1942. This was greater than the entire merchant vessel production by American shipping yards last year, the commission said.)

"Defeat of the U-boat threat is still as vital to victory in this war as it was in the last," he said.

"We can't win the war fighting defensively," he said. "Reckless, unprepared action only loses wars, but the strategy of calculated risk wherein we strike the enemy and strike him hard will produce victory."

Stark said he hoped that Allied superiority in both merchant vessels and warships will put the Axis in a position "where we will be able not only to match loss for loss but be able to strike and take even greater losses in order to achieve our objective."

Stark, who was chief of American naval operations until he replaced Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley here last week, declined to define the limits of his command.

Friends Tell How Giraud Wove Rope

Vichy, May 1 (Delayed) (AP).—Gen. Henri Honore Giraud disclosed today that eight months of painstaking plans paved the way for his strange flight from supposedly escape-proof Koenigstein Fortress where he was a prisoner of war.

Here is the story as Giraud told it to friends:

"For eight months every package I received from my wife included strands of thread which I wove into a cable 20 meters (about 65 feet) long. (Thirty-seven words were deleted here by the censor.)

"Shortly afterward I reached the nearest railroad station, but the alarm was quickly given and severe control already had been organized at the station.

"Without hesitating I took a young woman traveler by the arm and marched through the gates onto the station platform with her. "After a trip without incident, I got off the train in an Alsatian station near the Swiss frontier. (Twenty-three words censored.)

"Then I crossed the frontier into Switzerland."

Other friends said that on his first try to escape, Giraud found the rope was too short and had to climb back and wait until he found enough material to extend it to the needed length.

When he finally made good his escape, these friends said, he came face to face with a German sentinel just after he had slipped down the rope.

"Pretty cold night, isn't it, my boy," Giraud is supposed to have asked the sentry.

The surprised sentinel was reported to have replied: "Yes, sir," as Giraud stuffed his hands in his pockets and strolled off, whistling.

Nazis Threaten Batista

Havana, Cuba, May 4 (AP).—A presidential palace announcement today said the Berlin radio had threatened President Batista who in a May Day address declared the United Nations had to attack "hyenas" wherever they are.

The Berlin radio was quoted as saying "President Batista, as one of the best educated (of Latin American presidents), and the nearest to war-fomenter Roosevelt, referred to us Germans as low animals. Friend Batista: Remember you live only a few meters from the seacoast."

Polar Flier Promoted

Moscow, May 4 (AP).—Col. Mikhail Gromov, Russian air hero who established a world record for long distance nonstop flight in 1937 by flying over the North Pole from Russia to California, was made a major general of aviation today by Premier Stalin.

He was one of 77 named generals in a long list of promotions. Gromov had been a colonel since the start of the war, commanding an aviation group which was credited with downing many German planes.

Belvoir Escapees Reported Caught Near Carlisle, Pa.

Three men, reported to be the trio of Fort Belvoir prisoners who escaped from the post guardhouse Sunday, were taken into custody yesterday near Carlisle, Pa., the Associated Press reported.

The men are alleged to be the same group that overpowered a sentry and seized his rifle, and later held up a driver of an Army truck.

The men were placed in Cumberland County jail to await their return to Fort Belvoir. Sheriff Bretz, who made the capture after an auto chase, identified them as George Austin of Williamson, W. Va., Kenneth Eckert, 21, of Bunker Hill, W. Va., and Bernard Butler, 21, of Philadelphia.

WAAC Action Delayed Again

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday again deferred action on the bill to create a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, carrying over its decision until another meeting scheduled for Friday morning.

Absence of Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah, who introduced the amendment to change the status of the corps by having its volunteers serve in the Army rather than as a separate unit, was given as the cause for action deferment.

Treasury Proposes 10% Postwar Refund Of 94% Excess Profits Tax on Corporations

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

The Treasury recommended yesterday that part of the money that would be taken from corporations by a flat 94 per cent excess profits tax be returned to them after the war as a recovery "nest egg."

Before the House Ways and Means Committee, Randolph Paul, Treasury tax adviser, outlined a plan to hold in reserve out of taxes a sum equal to 10 per cent of each corporation's earnings subject to the excess profits tax.

Bonds Would Be Issued

This reserve would be returned to the companies within a limited period after the war, to be used for new capital equipment and to stimulate postwar employment. It would not be subject to tax on return. Companies meanwhile would be issued bonds representing their separate claims on the reserve.

The Ways and Means Committee launched a study of several plans for postwar funds after approving corporation taxes totaling $2,490,400,000.

Today members will hear Colin F. Stam, Congressional staff expert, outline the British plan. England imposes a 100 per cent tax on excess profits, but will refund 20 per cent of the tax after the war.

A modification of the British plan has strong support in the committee. Originally presented by Clinton Davidson of Fiduciary Counsel, Inc., this modification calls for issuance of nonnegotiable, noninterest-bearing bonds to corporatios, equal to 20 per cent of corporate income subject to the excess profits tax. These could be redeemed after the war, but would be subject to all corporate taxes when cashed.

Main difference between this and the Treasury plan, members indicated, is that the Paul proposal gives the Treasury a large measure of control over return and use of the refunded money even after the war. Although the amount of the reserve would be stepped up to 20 per cent under the Davidson plan, committee sponsors said this would be cut down by taxes.

Paul's recommendations, a variation of suggestions originally presented by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, would bring down the 94 per cent flat excess profits tax to a fraction below 84 per cent, once postwar refunds were made.

When Morgenthau originally went before the committee, he proposed that such portion of the tax on any dollar of corporate income exceeding 80 per cent should be set aside by the Treasury for the account of the corporation.

"After the war there may well be need for a large volume of expenditure in readjusting industry and maintaining employment," the Secretary told the committee.

The committee appeared far from a vote on any of the refund proposals and may continue discussions several days before passing on to the next big item in the Treasury's tax recommendations—increased individual income taxes to raise another three billion in taxes.

As the committee's corporate tax proposals fell $569,600,000 short of what the Treasury sought in corporation taxes, some members favored "time out" to readjust sights on the Administration's total seven-billion-dollar tax goal. An effort may be made to reach a tentative agreement on how much will be raised in each of the remaining fields. This would involve some preliminary decision on a sales tax.

Early yesterday, the committee rounded out its surtax schedules by voting to raise from 6 to 10 per cent the surtax on corporations with net incomes of not more than $25,000. The committee last week agreed on a 16 per cent surtax on corporate net incomes of $25,000 or more.

In other action, the committee voted to retain the present capital stock tax and its related declared value excess profits taxes.

The capital stock tax is $1.25 on each $1,000 of declared value. The declared value excess profits tax imposes a 6.6 per cent rate on earnings between 10 and 15 per cent of the stocks declared value and a rate of 13.2 per cent on earnings exceeding 15 per cent of the stock's declared value.

The grand total of $2,490,400,000 in additional corporation taxes voted by the committee raised the corporate tax load from $7,937,100,000 on the basis of present taxes to $10,427,500,000 with the new tax schedule.

Revised estimates showed the committee's corporate tax changes would result in the following yields:

Excess profits—Increase of $2,715,500,000.

War surtax—Increase of $631,700,000.

Normal tax—Decrease of $746,500,000.

Declared value tax—Decrease of $38,500,000.

Capital stock tax—Decrease of $51,500,000.

Roosevelt Slashes CCC and NYA Funds 75%

Administrator Paul V. McNutt, the President recommended.

Selection of youths for training, the message said, should be made by the United States Employment Service and the Social Security Board. Workers are to be trained for industries where labor shortages exist at the approximate rate of 80,000 per ten-week training period.

The President recommended that $3,775,000 be provided National Youth Administrator Aubrey Williams for administrative expenses. For defense training and student-aid, NYA's 1942 appropriation carried $8,028,000 for administrative expenses. The agency's total recommended appropriation was $151,767,000, including $45,000 for printing.

For pay, subsistence, travel, clothing and a maximum of $50 for each enrollee submitting to blood transfusions for discharged enrollees, the President recommended $27,248,000 for the CCC. His Budget Bureau estimates for "all other necessary expenses in connection with administration" of the camps were $21,853,000, bringing the total for the agency to $49,101,000. Current CCC appropriations totaled $246,960,000.

Urges Conservation Work

The "wartime activities of the small nucleus of CCC camps provided for in this estimate," the budget message said, should be directed, in the main, to "the protection and conservation of forest and other resources which are subject to sudden and violent destruction."

The message recommended that Congress include in the language of the 1943 appropriation, a provision carried in the 1942 act requiring NYA officials and employes and persons taking war training courses to swear allegiance to the Constitution. Like that of the 1942 act, the language recommended by the President would deny training to persons refusing employment "under reasonable working conditions" at prevailing wages.

CCC, which has spent $2,700,000,000 since its creation in 1933, had a peak enrollment in 1935 of 520,000 youths in 2652 camps. The agency's 600 existing camps should be cut in half by the end of July and, thereafter, scaled down to 150 by the end of September, with an estimated average enrollment of 190 per camp.

Economy Bloc Unsatisfied

Reaction among NYA and CCC officials indicated that the President had cut into their funds more deeply than had been expected, but the most arden congressional economy advocates were not satisfied.

"These agencies ought to be abolished," declared Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, ranking Appropriations Committee member who has written bills amed at their demise. "The President has recommended tremendous savings, all right, but we have no use for these agencies in time of war, when everyone who wants work can get it."

Meanwhile, a special Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, headed by Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland studied results of an economy survey of the Government.

Tydings said the study has uncovered a "good bit of duplication and overlapping," and has provided information with which "very substantial savings of time, money and office space" could be effected.

In the meantime, study is being made of a way in which savings can be made despite the fact that all but two appropriation bills have cleared Congress. Tydings suggested that Congress could, by legislation, "recapture" appropriations already made.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Cannon, of Missouri, said the Tydings proposal seemed "complicated." He observed that the President, with congressional authority, "can and is now sequestering out of appropriations already made" funds which he believes need not be spent.

Conceding the "physical possibility" of repealing appropriations, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, said: "You can't recapture money that has already gone over the dam."

Iraq's Minister Offers Credentials

Iraq moved a step nearer yesterday toward actually getting United States lend-lease aid by accrediting its first Minister to Washington.

Small, swart Ali Jawdat Al-Ayoubi, who fought with Lawrence of Arabia in the other World War, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt.

The White House already has announced that lend-lease assistance would be extended to both Iraq and Iran.

Steel Banned for Virtually All Civilian Goods

tongs, lipstick holders and fountain pens.

Limited production of the items specified is allowed for 90 days. As of the first week in August, however, steel for the commodities will be outlawed for the duration of the war and may not even be used in the manufacture of the items for purchase by the armed services.

Some Items on List

In denying steel for the articles listed, the drastic order has the effect of actually prohibiting the manufacture of most of them, since the fabricators are forbidden to use other metals as substitutes, except silver and gold.

Thus, if bathtubs or B-B shot are to be made, they will have to be of gold or silver, or some such substitute as wood or glass. Many of the items on the list are, of course, impossible of manufacture except out of metals of some variety.

Some of the major uses for which steel and metal will be banned after the 90-day period are furniture, beds, most containers, air conditioning systems, advertising novelties, fans, office machinery, most items of tableware, cabinets, cans for a wide variety of articles, ornaments and frames of all kinds, stoves, all decorative iron products, counter tops, all sporting goods, drawer pulls, dress forms, ornamental and chain link fences, water coolers, structural steel for home building, ornamental fountains, escalators, garage hoists, car lifts and racks, grass, hedge and flower shears, foot scrapers, ornamental grilles, gutters, spouting and conductor pipes in one-family dwellings, jewelry, all desk equipment, lawn sprinklers, lighting poles and standards, mailing tubes and mail boxes, novelties and souvenirs of all kinds, cages, park and recreational benches, photographic and phonographic accessories, pleasure boats, push carts, fence posts, scaffolding, sewer pipe, sign posts, spittoons, statues, swivel chairs, tags of all sorts, most storage tanks, wagon bodies, wheelbarrows (except wheels), and store display equipment and show cases.

Odds and ends listed in the all-inclusive order are such items as lobster forks, beer steins, cake tongs, book-ends, chicken crates, cheese dishes, cigar clippers, compacts, crumb trays, door knockers, chimes, egg slicers, fly traps, flagpoles, fish acquariums, hair curlers, house numerals, ice cube trays, inkwell holders, jam boxes, jelly molds, letter openers, menu holders, napkin rings, pie plates, rotary door bells, sitz baths, sugar holders, wardrobe trunks and wine coolers.

Under the terms of the order, a manufacturer has 15 days to deliver or accept delivery of iron or steel for any of the items mentioned, and another 30 days to finish processing parts. For 45 days more the parts may be assembled up to 75 per cent of the manufacturer's monthly level of business during 1941.

For some of the items on the list, unrestricted production is allowed for 90 days if the articles are destined for the Army, Navy, or Maritime Commission.

All Will Feel Effect

Housewives and glamour girls alike will feel effects of the order when production ceases on a variety of beauty aids and kitchen equipment, and when existing stocks disappear from dealers' shelves.

On the banned list are toilet sets, compacts, jewelry boxes, cigarette cases and lighters, combs, permanent-wave machines, hair curlers and dryers, manicure implements, perfume atomizers and purse and handbag frames.

Kitchen articles appearing on the list include teapots, cutlery, biscuit boxes, bread racks, butter chips, butter knives, dinner bells, dishwashing machines, cake cutters, stainless kitchenware and candy dishes.

Other household articles mentioned were awning frames, attic fans, bird cages, clothesline pulleys, coal chutes, drain boards, fireplace equipment and screens, flower boxes and laundry chutes.

Sporting and athletic goods generally were named, with the following items specifically mentioned: Roller and ice skates, ski racks, croquet sets, BB shot for air rifles, and amusement park devices.

The business office will feel the pinch because of prohibitions affecting automatic pencils, cash registers and cash boxes, and various machinery for making change, canceling checks, numbering checks, envelope handling, and stamping, and check writing.

For the country club set to worry about were stop-orders on cocktail shakers, whisky service sets, wine coolers, bottle holders, and other items.

Unleashing Death Difficult For U. S. Airmen—at First

American airmen getting their first taste of battle in the Far East frequently have a hard time realizing they are actually "playing for keeps," according to Lieut. Elliott Vandevanter, jr., who has been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross for blasting a Jap invasion fleet off Bali.

Vandevanter, in a talk before students of the University of Maryland yesterday, said that in a bombing assault on a convoy after the Jap invasion of the Philippines, his bombardier shouted: "Am I really supposed to bomb those ships?" He added that the bombardier didn't have to be told twice.

Vandevanter, whose wife is living with her mother, Mrs. Patrick Lathrop, at 2129 Florida Avenue Northwest, has been temporarily relieved of duty n the Far East to assist the Air Corps in its recruiting drive. He is one of several officers inaugurating a new system of recruiting college students in which the students are permitted to complete their college traning before being called to duty.

The students enlist as privates until called to duty when they are immediately put into the offcers and pilots training school for a commisson, provided they can pass the physical and scholastic examinations.

The officers addressing the Maryland group yesterday ncluded Maj. R. C. Larsen and Lieut. E. J. Prejean, both of Mitchell Field.

5 Billions More Sought for RFC

President Roosevelt has authorized Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones to seek immediate congressional approval of a five-billion-dollar increase in the capital of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. for further expansion of the Government's armament plant and stockpile program.

The additional money is needed to finance the unprecedented progress made in construction of munitions and synthetic rubber plants and to finance purchase of strategic metals and other essentials of the war, a spokesman for the RFC said.

Faddis Charges Move to Organize Separate Air Corps

By the Associated Press

A charge that officers' commissions are being dealt out with an eye to creating pressure for a separate Air Corps came yesterday from Rpresentative Faddis (Democrat), Pennsylvania, who is warring against all commissions to civilians without military training.

That, Faddis declared in a statement, appeared to him to be the purpose of "this wholesale commissoining of civilians of social and political prominence in the Air Corps of the Army and Navy."

"It will be very easy," he argued, "to indoctrinate them with the philosophy of a separate Air Corps and when the war is ever to bring political pressure on such a demand."

Faddis has attacked an amendment barring "quickie" commissions to a Senate-approved bill to boost the lowest grade Army and Navy pay from $21 to $42 monthly. The bill is to come up for debate in the House tomorrow.

The Army and Navy are opposing his amendment.

"Let them give the young men who completed thtree years of instruction at the C. M. T. C. camps a chance to take an examination for second lieutenants."

Eastman Rules All Rubbered Transport

All Vehicles Using Tires Put Under Him; Travel Rationing Plan Under Study

By Eric Friedheim
International News Service Staff Writer

Control of all vehicles using rubber tires, including private automobiles, trucks and taxis, yesterday was placed in the hands of Transportation Administrator Joseph B. Eastman by President Roosevelt.

Eastman immediately announced that such control probably would be effected through rationing of tires and gasoline.

The President's sweeping order specifically directs Eastman to bring about a limitation in the nonessential operations of automoblies, buses, trucks, taxicabs and other transports using rubber.

Mr. Roosevelt's order highlighted a series of other developments in the Nation's transportation field, including:

1. Disclosure by Government officials that rationing of railroad and bus tickets is being discussed;

2. Official indications that gasoline rationing will be extended throughout the country after July 1;

3. Announcement by Oil Coordinator Harold Ickes that he will recommend an East Coast gasoline rationing program to the War Production Board today, and,

4. Decison of oil executives to meet today on methods of speeding oil shipments including construction of a 1400-mile pipe line from Texas to the North.

Authority Over All Cars

Eastman, by virtue of the President's order, will have complete authority over the use of the Nation's 32 million passenger automobiles and other rubber-tired vehicles. The order directs him to:

"Formulate measures to conserve and assure maximum utilization of the existing supply of civilian transport services dependent upon rubber, including the limitation of the use of rubber-borne transportation facilities in nonessential civilian activities, and the regulation of the use or distribution of such transportation facilities among essential activities."

It is indicated that the initial phases of the control program will be directed at the operation of bus lines, taxicabs and trucks. The Government will insist that these vehicles be used only for transportation services deemed necessary to the public welfare.

Control over private passenger automobiles can be effected completely through restrictions on the sale of gasoline.

Mr. Roosevelt's order to conserve rubber-borne transportation facilities followed a warning by Eastman that restrictions on railroad and bus services are imminent.

Railroads, according to Eastman, will be required to eliminate most of their luxury facilities such as parlor, lounge, club and Pullman cars. These will be converted into day coaches to handle the mounting volume of rail passengers.

Many railroad operations will be diverted to areas of heavy traffic. Buses will serve those regions left without railroad transportation.

Officials already are discussing a priorities system for passengers, requiring persons to show good reasons before they would be permitted to travel on railroads and buses.

Meanwhile Ickes informed a Congressional committee that petroleum stocks in the Eastern States are continuing to dwindle. He added that overland oil shipments still are some 400,000 barrels per day below demand.

According to Ickes, Eastern oil inventories on April 11 were 13,200,000 barrels less than was on hand a year ago.

Today he will recommend to the War Production Board the amount of gasoline each motorist in the Eastern States should be permitted to buy after May 15. Despite the shortage, Ickes is expected to suggest a higher ration than the 2½ to 5 gallon weekly maximum suggested unofficially by the Office of Price Administration recently.

Oil executives meet here today to discuss methods of increasing the flow of oil into the Eastern States by rail, pipeline and barges. Under consideration is the construction of a 1400-mile pipeline to carry 300,000 barrels of oil daily northward to Illinois and Ohio River points. The line would be built from second-hand materials at a cost of some 25 million dollars.

Roosevelt Greets D. A. R. Congress

Calls on Them to Spread Gospel of Sacrifice, Unity, Singleness of Purpose on Home Front

By International News Service

Chicago, May 4.—Declaring that "our men in uniform have proved worthy of America," President Roosevelt tonight called upon the Daughters of the American Revolution to spread the gospel of sacrifice, unity and singleness of purpose on the home front.

In a letter to the D. A. R.'s fifty-first Continental Congress, which got under way today with 1200 women in attendance, the President stated:

"Two million men have been called to arms. In far places and near, our soldiers, our sailors, our air pilots, the beleaguered men of the Merchant Marine, have shown the stuff of heroes. Everything we have asked of them they have delivered. Everything—and more.

"There was no confusion of purpose, no softness in deeds, in Bataan. There were heroes at Wake Island and Pearl Harbor and in the rice paddies of Java. Our men in uniform have proved worthy of America. Now it is up to us at home to prove worthy of them.

"They have set us an example of sacrifice, of unity, of singleness of purpose that we on the home front must emulate if the Nation is to survive."

The President's message, striking a high note of patriotism at a congress being held outside of Washington for the first time because of war-crowded conditions there, quoted from Thomas Jefferson in asking the women to "bury in oblivion all internal differences and rally around the standard of their country."

Earlier the delegates were addressed by a number of high-ranking military leaders, including Maj. Gen. George Grunert, commandant of the Sixth Corps Area; Admiral John Downes, commandant of the Ninth Naval Corps, and Col. Chester Fordney, of the United States Marines.

All stressed the importance of unity and home morale to support the armed forces.

The Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, said that "the pattern of the future should be discernible, in its broad outlines, by examination of the errors and weaknesses of the past," and listed as "major defects in the conduct of foreign relations across the last quarter of a century:"

"1. Excessive nationalism and insistence on unlimited sovereignty by individual states . . ."

"2. Collective security was only half attempted . . ."

Dr. Walsh also said that equitable distribution of essential raw materials and "reasonable provision for outlets in the case of countries of rapidly increasing population . . . when additional space for necessary emigration is honestly needed," are necessary to the preservation of peace, once it is attained.

Court of Appeals Will Determine Hospital Liability

The full bench of the Court of Appeals took under advisement yesterday a $20,000 damage suit involving the question whether Washington hospitals can be sued for damages.

On the Apellate Court's own motion, the case was reheard yesterday by all six jurists. The case had been before Justices Wiley Rutledge, Justin Miller and Fred Vinson.

The suit is by Miss Susan M. Hughes, a nurse, against Georgetown Hospital. Miss Hughes, who was called for special duty at the hospital, was awarded a jury verdict of $20,000 in District Court after testifying that she was seriously and permanently injured at the hospital when she was struck by a door carelessly flung open.

Miss Hughes' attorney, Emmett Leo Sheehan, argued that the hospital is liable in all kinds of action under the special act of Congress which created the institution; that the defendant's theory of immunity concerning local hospitals was without legal merit.

Social Justice Is Suspended

The Attorney General, it was recalled, indicated his policy on law enforcement clearly when he referred the Social Justice code to the grand jury.

"We intend to present evidence of responsibility as to who published and wrote Social Justice," he said, "and also evidence of any tie-up with the Axis."

Social Justice was founded in 1936, by Charles E. Coughlin, a priest who turned from his clerical office and became a radio agitator during the depression. Coughlin's superiors in the Church several times formally disavowed any share in or approval of his agitation.

Used Nazi Propaganda Line

Besides agitating radical financial measures, Coughlin used Social Justice to foment racial and religious prejudice to oppose aid to the nations fighting Hitler and—since the Pearl Harbor attack—to repeat the propaganda of Nazi radio stations.

Postmaster General Walker two weeks ago barred the magazine from the mails, pending the hearing yesterday before Assistant Postmasters General Ambrose O'Connell, Smith W. Purdum and Walter Myers.

There was no answer when the respondents were called, to show cause why Social Justice should not be barred from the mails for sedition.

Calvin W. Hassell, assistant solicitor of the department, then read a letter in which Coughlin's nominal editor-president said the magazine was folding up and abandoning its second-class mailing privilege.

Hassell read, too, a telegram from Coughlin saying this plan had his approval.

By this strategem the agitator averted an official ruling by the Postoffice Department upon the question whether his magazine was seditions.

Indifference Laid To Officials

of his plant and in erecting facilities to protect it against sabotage. He said the inventor then came to Washington and asked the Navy for an amortization certificate to permit him to deduct expansion costs from taxable income, as permitted by law.

The Navy's answer in denying the application, said Kane, was that other fastener manufacturers had ample materials and that no fastener shortage was in sight. At that time, Kane observed, a screw seemed of small consequence when compared with a big bomber, and Dzus, like other small accessory manufacturers, were "lost in the scramble for expansion" by the larger companies making the end product.

The scramble continues, Kane stated, "until a bottleneck develops and then everybody suddenly realizes its (the gadget's) importance."

Another factor contributing to fastener shortages, said Kane, was the refusal of OPM to grant Dzus a blanket priority. As a result, he continued, Dzus was compelled to delay procurement of his raw materials until he received a priority from plane manufacturers together with their orders, an operation which involved "endless" red tape and delays.

Arnold had told the committee of complaints from Douglas aircraft of Dzus' slowness in making deliveries. Dzus declared that at the time Douglas complained, it had 140,000 fasteners in its surplus stock and that these fasteners were listed as surplus by OPM. Dzus said Douglas' purchasing department didn't know of the surplus.

"The attempt to oversimplify this thing and say that this shortage (in fasteners) exists merely because Dzus has a patent is not a fact," Kane declared.

The attorney told of Dzus' repeated efforts early in the defense program to get an idea of what the war needs for his product might be. The inventor wrote many letters to members of the aviation industry and to the War Department, and at one time was under investigation by the Justice Department, suspicious that the inventor was attempting to get plane production schedules for the Axis.

"I think this man presents an example of a prime American virtue—the refusal of a man to be frozen in one economic position," said Kane. "That is what we are fighting for."

Madagascar Is Occupied by the British

Africa itself.

Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye, the Vichy representative at Washington, said he was notified prior to the London and Washington announcements of the action taken at Madagascar.

An aide of the ambassador said that he was informed that President Roosevelt requested that he call at the State Department. There the ambassador was informed of the action at about 8:30 p. m., Eastern War Time.

The preliminary notification, the aide said, was a "gesture of courtesy" by the President to the ambassador.

The text of the State Department announcement follows:

"The French Ambassador was informed this evening in the following sense:

"The President of the United States has been informed that Madagascar has been occupied by British forces. This occupation has the full approval and support of the Government of the United States.

"The Island of Madagascar presents the definite danger to the United Nations of occupation or use by the Axis powers, especially Japan.

"Such occupation by the Axis powers would constitute a definite and serious danger to the United Nations, in their fight to maintain the kind of civilization to which France and to which the United Nations have been so long accustomed.

"The Government of the United States is at war with the Axis powers and if it becomes necessary or desirable for American troops or ships to use Madagascar in the common cause, the United States will not hesitate to do so at any time.

"The United States and Great Britain are in accord that Madagascar will, of course, be restored to France after the war or at any time the occupation of Madagascar is no longer essential to the common cause of the United Nations.

"In view of the fact that the island of Madagascar will be held in trust for France, in order to protect it from any attack by any one of the Axis powers, any warlike act permitted by the French government against the government of Great Britain or the Government of the United States would, of necessity, have to be regarded by the Government of the United States as an attack upon the United Nations as a whole.

"The American Charge d'Affaires ad interim at Vichy was instructed to convey this message to the French government."

Grand Jury Hands Up 59 Indictments

In Face of Cut

$120,278,000 Asked to Spur Food Output

Copyright by Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress for $120,278,000 to stimulate the "food-for-freedom" program through the Farm Security Administration.

The supplemental request was made in the face of a 45 million dollar cut the House made in that agency's funds when it passed the regular Agriculture Department supply bill. This measure has been the subject of controversy in the Senate Appropriations Committee for weeks.

Of the request, $14,778,000 is for cash out of the Treasury. The RFC would furnish $105,500,000 in loans for credit to small farmers and to farmers in the FSA consolidated farms, which the House Agriculture Committee branded as "communistic."

"The additional appropriation and loan authorization are requested as a part of the food-for-freedom program," the request said. "In order to meet our food requirements and those of our Allies, it is clearly apparent that every effort must be made to increase our production of agricultural commodities to the fullest extent. No farmer should be precluded from doing his part because of lack of credit."

The President disclosed that Federal farm and private lending agencies had been urged to give credit to farmers to aid them in producing more food for the war.

Marshall Gift Tests Aplomb Of Diplomats

By the United Press

London, May 4.—This is a story about cabbages and brussels sprouts, and if Gen. George C. Marshall and Harry Hopkins read it perhaps they will understand the lack of enthusiasm with which their gift of greenstuff was received by embassy officials when they flew here from America last month.

Everyone was in a great state of anticipation at the embassy when it was announced that the general and Hopkins had brought a little present by plane from Bermuda. Subsecretaries and clerks and stenographers gathered around the two big crates. Someone pried loose a board and as everyone watched, the first box was seen to be filled with cabbages.

They were fine-looking cabbages, just a day away from the Bermuda market place. The leaves were fresh and green and the heads were of ample size. But they were cabbages, and everyone sighed involuntarily and then remembered their manners and thanked the donors.

Then the second crate was opened and there was as fine a batch of sprouts as anyone ever saw. The clerks and the other help looked like people who couldn't believe their eyes. It was as though someone had played a practical joke. But they thanked General Marshall and Hopkins and hid their disappointment as well as possible.

Now, the reason everyone felt that way is that whatever else may be missing from the English table there never is a dearth of cabbages and sprouts.

It is practically impossible to escape cabbages and sprouts from October until May. They are items in the English tradition, and although Lord Northcliffe once offered a prize for anyone who could provide a recipe for making sprouts palatable, he failed to discourage the cooks. He also failed to get a good recipe.

And that is why, General Marshall and Mr. Hopkins, your friends didn't shoult for joy when they opened your gifts.

Navy Lists 27 District Area Men Killed in Action

Thirteen naval officers and 14 enlisted men from the Washington area have been killed in action since war began, the Navy's first casualty list disclosed yesterday.

The highest ranking officers were Rear Admiral Isaac Campbell Kidd of Washington, commander of a Pacific fleet battleship division, who went down with his ship during the December 7 Pearl Harbor attack, and Rear Admiral John W. Wilcox, jr., of Chevy Chase, lost overboard at sea during heavy weather early last month.

The total number of Navy casualties—dead, wounded and missing—made public Saturday, was 6393 during the period from the Pearl Harbor attack to April 15. Of these 2991 were listed as dead, 907 wounded and 2495 missing.

By comparison, the total for the first four months of the war is one and a half times as large as the total Navy casualties in the first World War.

The Navy Department did not disclose where and how most of the Navy and Marine Corps fatalities occurred, but said the "preponderant share" resulted in direct action with the enemy.

Ensign Marshall Eugene Darby, jr., 23, was the son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Marshall Eugene Darby, of 4737 MacArthur Boulevard Northwest, and a native of Washington.

DARBY

Ensign Darby attended the Dover (N. J.) High School and Baltimore Polytechnic Institute before his appointment to the Naval Academy in 1938.

At Annapolis he received his numerals as a member of the plebe swimming team, and was a member of the radio club and a chapel usher.

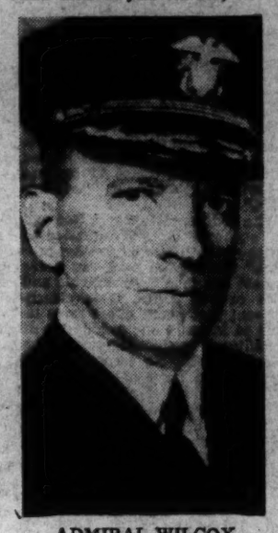
Following graduation he was assigned to the battleship Oklahoma, which capsized at Pearl Harbor December 7.

Besides his parents, he leaves a brother, Charles R. Darby, and two grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Klotz, all of Washington.

Rear Admiral John Walter Wilcox

Rear Admiral John Walter Wilcox, 60, was lost overboard at sea last month while on an important and undisclosed command. The Navy reported April 6 that he had been lost "during normal cruising."

His wife, the former Caroline Manigault of Charleston, S. C., and their 21-year-old son, Arthur, and 11-year-old daughter, Mary, live at 215 Kennedy Drive, Chevy Chase, Md.



ADMIRAL WILCOX

Admiral Wilcox had been president of the Navy Board of Inspection and Survey until his assignment to a sea command last November.

A native of Millidgeville, Ga., Admiral Wilcox was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1901, and following graduation served on the U. S. S. West Virginia. During the last war he was commended for service with the Atlantic Fleet.

His post-World War service included lengthy tours of duty in Washington, at the Naval Academy and at sea. He held the Mexican Service Medal for duty in the U. S. S. Dolphin in 1914, and the Victory Medal with Atlantic Fleet Clasp.

Marshall Gordon Crockett

Marshall Gordon Crockett, 20, of 7123 Ninth Street Northwest, is missing, the Navy said, presumed to have been lost at sea when the ship on which he was serving ran aground in a Newfoundland gale.

CROCKETT

Crockett, a graduate of McKinley High School, enlisted in the Navy in October, 1940, and intended to study aeronautics.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Lewis F. Caswell, a brother, Gibson M. Crockett, and a sister, Miss Catherine Crockett, all of Washington.

This Mother Has Her Own Golden Rule

No. 5 in a Series

Mother's Day would come 365 times a year and to celebrate it would be compulsory, meaning everyone would have to honor motherhood by doing a good turn for every son who wore a uniform, if Ruth Buchanan had her way.

The soldier-sailor dances held Saturday nights in St. John's Parish Hall are made possible by the efforts of Mrs. Buchanan and Coleman Jennings. Every Sunday she entertains at lunch in her home for four enlisted men and four young women.

Each Friday afternoon is tea time for young officers and their wives at the Buchanan residence, 1728 Massachusetts Avenue northwest.

Last winter Mrs. Buchanan's elder son, James, who is in the R. C. A. F., was seriously ill with pneumonia. His convalescence was speeded by the care of a group of Canadian women—organized to help the foreign youths in their midst—who not only brought oranges and all that but wrote air-mail letters daily to his mother in Washington, keeping her posted on the lad's condition.

Mrs. Buchanan explains, with quiet pride, that the reason James, aged 23, is in the R. C. A. F. is that a leg injury resulted in his being honorably discharged from the U. S. Naval Reserve.

Just a year ago he crossed the border and enlisted. Next Saturday, incidentally, he will be married.

Her younger son, John, pleaded that he be allowed to enlist as an aviation cadet instead of returning to prep school after the Easter holiday. Reluctantly Mrs. Buchanan gave in.

So with one son in service and another on the way in, it ought to be pretty clear that her campaign for soldier boy hospitality has a Golden Rule angle: Do unto others' sons as you would have others do unto yours.

Folk Festival

Diplomats Plan to See Groups From Their Homelands

In Washington's parks and in private auditoriums, the talent crews for Washington's Ninth Annual Folk Festival were settling into the serious business of last minute rehearsals, preparatory for the opening matinee at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow in Constitution Hall.

Other folk groups are expected to reach town today, to swell the corps of entertainers to 600 persons. The 40 groups in this year's festival have been recruited for their variety of interest to Washingtonians young and old, school children, and Government workers, diplomats and devotees of folk art.

A large group of the Diplomatic Corps has shown marked interest since this year as festival presents either groups from their own countries or music that originated in their countries performed by American groups in the traditional manner.

Lord Halifax, Ambassador from Great Britain, plans to attend the performance Friday evening when the boys of the School of Organic Education of Fairhope, Alabama, will do a group of old English morris and sword dances. Among their selections will be "Kirkby Malzeard," a traditional sword dance that originated in a small town in West Riding, Yorkshire, the county in which Lord Halifax was born and which he represented in Parliament. The Kirkby men performed their dance annually at the Yuletide.

The Minister of Canada plans to welcome Le Quatour Alouette, singers sent as good-will messengers from the Governmnet of the Provinceof Quebec, Tuesday evening when the quartet will be the guests of the National Press Club at a special showing of Canadian films. The quartet will sing a group of songs between films and later appear on the radio over station WJSV in other songs, from 10 to 10:15 p. m. At the Press Club their numbers will include the popular Canadian air, "Oh, Canada!" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The Special Agent from India, Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, is planning a reception at his headquarters for Wasantha Wana Singh and his East Indian group.

Col. Vladimer Hurban, minister of Czechoslovakia will receive the Czechoslovak Group from Cleveland, Ohio, at the legation and they will be entertained by the local colony of their nationality.

John Popovich and his Ukrainian Group, also coming from Cleveland, will be guests at a reception planned by Ukranians of the District.

The local Lithuanians plan a similar reception and party for the Lithuanian Group coming from Chicago.

The Hon. Joaquin M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the Philippine Islands to the United States, is sponsoring and plans to entertain the group of young Filipino students, who came from the islands last fall and are attending college at Ann Arbor, Mich., who will present native Fillpino dances and music on all the festival programs.

The famous Cowboy Square Dancers, the Pioneer Promenaders from the University of Denver at Denver, Colo., will be entertained by groups of several alumni or other organizations connected with the university at Denver.

Similarly some people in Washington who are from Texas plan several parties for the cowboys from Anson, Texas, who will present the famous "Cowboys' Christmas Ball" on Saturday's programs.

Already Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, founder and director of the festivals, has received cablegrams from distinguished folk authorities outside the country who send greetings and good wishes though they will not be present this year. Among these are: Miss Dorothy Darlington of London, England, who is getting together the exiled folk of Europe who are in London and keeping up the folk music according to their tradition; Mme. Lina Mathon Fussman of Haiti who was here last year with a group sent by the President of Haiti; and Miss Alice Brown of Honolulu, Hawaii, who brought a group from those islands in 1940.

ENGLISH SWORD DANCERS who will perform in the Folk Festival opening tomorrow in Constitution Hall are from the home county of Lord Halifax. The British Ambassador plans to attend the festival Friday to see the group trade has imposed upon them.

Army Makes Rapid Strides In Training

The First, for instance, has been selected to supply the cadre, the skeleton, for the new Seventy-sixth Division to be activated in June at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

"We are sending them some of the best men we've got," said a staff officer of the First. "We want that outfit to be another First Division.

Both the First and the Thirty-sixth have been through full-scale field maneuvers. They have operated as divisions in corps and armies and on separate missions.

They are like football teams which have finished spring practice, have played a few games and have gone back to blocking and tackling, ironing out deficiences, perfecting themselves in the fundamentals, training the individual in his part in the whole team.

As these divisions have trained through the past 18 months they have been constantly weakened by losses of veterans and strengthened by additions of recruits whom they have made into soldiers after their own pattern. Throughout this process they have contributed to the growth and strength of the rest of the Army. Actually in that time they have trained not two divisions but four in numbers of officers and men who have passed through their ranks.

From Selectee to Officer Quickly

When the Thirty-sixth was inducted into Federal service in November, 1940, it brought with it 12,536 officers and men. It now has 13,700, but in the 18 months between then and now, 24,000 have worn its arrowhead insignia.

Altogether its enlisted men have furnished 607 commissioned officers to an Army which badly needs officers. The division supplied 250 officers to itself from its own enlisted ranks and sent 357 through officer candidate schools.

It has given 33 officers and 72 men for cadres; 12 officers and 12 men have gone to schools as instructors; 1,250 men have been turned over to the Air Forces to become pilots, observers, bombardiers, gunners and navigators.

It has received 10,785 recruits from reception centers and replacement centers, trained them and kept them in its ranks or sent them on to train other units.

When it was trimmed down from square to triangular two months ago it supplied thousands of trained and disciplined men in organized companies, batteries and battalions to GHQ and Army Artillery, Infantry, Engineer and Quartermaster and Medical forces.

A History of the First

The First, made up of old regiments of the Regular Army, was brought together as a division for the first time since the first World War at Fort Benning, Ga., in October, 1939. It spent the winter there in tents, then operated as a division in the 1940 maneuvers in Louisiana. After those were finished its regiments were scattered to their posts again until August, 1940, when the division was assembled for the maneuvers at Ogdensburg, N. Y. It was broken up again until February 1, 1941, when it was reassembled at Fort Devens, Mass.

Since that time it has supplied 316 enlisted men to Officer Candidate Schools; 18 officers and 1200 men as the Seventy-sixth Division cadre; 35 officers and 51 men to the Air Forces as cadets and three officers to the paratroops.

It has absorbed and trained 7560 recruits from reception and replacement centers, men who now wear the division's red numeral 1 on their shoulders or have gone on to train other recruits in other places.

That record is the record of the whole Army since it began its great expansion a year and a half ago. Because its strength has been built around the few veterans it contained at the beginning, because no unit, new or old, has ever been without this leavening of experienced officers and men, it has been able to undergo one dilution after another without weakening it beyond the point where it could have made itself felt in battle had that been necessary.

Its training now, as exemplified in the training of the First and Thirty-sixth Divisions, is designed to make junior officers, non-commissioned officers and men able, self-reliant and fit to command wherever the fortress of battle might thrust them into command. The men of these divisions are being confronted at every turn with situations they will meet in combat.

"Our aim," said one of their officers, "is to develop teamwork to the highest possible degree. We want our division to go into battle not just as a team but as a team of teams."

One day last week the First Division was scattered from one end of the reservation to the other. Every regiment, every battalion was at some task designed to harden it or to develop its capacity for meeting battle situations until meeting them becomes instinctive.

A Different System Now

While the old men of the two divisions are going through this process their recruits are learning the rudiments of soldiering. Both divisions suffered last year from the shock of trying to digest large helpings of new recruits without taking time to chew them.

They are doing it differently now; the new men are formed into training battalions around cadres from the regiments and their training goes ahead without interfering with the division's progress until they are ready to take their places alongside the veterans. Even so, the new men are identified at once with the regiments in which they will serve. Their cadres come from these regiments and their training battalions bear their regimental designations.

Out in the field an Infantry regiment of the First Division is on a practice march of 18 miles. Its headquarters goes ahead with the regimental train and sets up the command post and company kitchens and digs latrine pits. When the soldiers arrive, hot and dusty and sweating, all that remains for them to do is pitch their shelter tents and rest. But do they?

No sooner are they dismissed than they scatter through the woods, looking for a place to swim, playing baseball, chasing razorback hogs or taking a busman's holiday just walking. They have reeled off 18 miles over macadam and sand as a matter of course. They are hard and tough and ready.

Another Infantry regiment is setting up a command post, the old men, an officer explained, "teaching the new men the tricks of the trade." The third Infantry regiment is going through small unit combat practice.

You can spot them on a brush-covered hillside, hugging the ground and moving forward by short rushes, one or two at a time. They are commanded by noncommissioned officers, deadly serious young men who know they can measure their own lives and the lives of their men by what they learn here now.

The Ammunition Is Live

The division's engineer battalion is on the combat range, working out battle problems by platoons under their noncommissioned platoon leaders. They fire live ammunition on this range at targets that bob up unexpectedly in odd corners of the land ahead and they are very careful about taking aim and squeezing the trigger and making every shot count.

They move ahead through a heavy pine thicket, their noncoms peering ahead through the mottled light for the "enemy." Their officers go along only as umpires; the men are fighting this bloodless battle on their own.

Ahead and slightly to the left, a row of dirty brown targets bobs up and a spatter of rifle fire breaks out. Tracers streak through the trees, dead leaves annoyed by the muzzle blasts of the rifles leap from the ground and shake themselves angrily, men confer on range and windage and settle themselves to fire while pine branches cut down by hasty high shots drift to earth.

In the midst of this turmoil of sound and confusion, another set of targets shows up on the right flank and the noncom commanding the platoon must make a new disposition of force immediately to meet this threat. He does this by hand signals, dispatches runners to his support element back in the woods, and the battle roars off in the new direction while umpires scratch in their notebooks for the critique to come.

The Artillery Works Out

All the division artillery, three battalions of 105 millimeter howitzers and one battalion of 155 howitzers, move out that night to the artillery range to fire a concentration known as the "GHQ test." This test was conceived to determine the ability of the batteries safely to fire over the infantry before entering the next phase of training, which will involve coordination of artillery fire with infantry movement.

Between 10 p. m. and midnight, each battery fires a half-dozen rounds to register on the targets, then officers and men turn in for a few hours sleep. At 4 a. m. they are up again, standing by their guns, shivering in the damp chill of early morning, squinting up through the camouflage nets at the calm unruffled stars.

At 4:30 the division artillery officer and his staff standing on a high observation tower between the guns and the target hear the telephone operator sing out the time-honored signal, "On the way!" and they turn their glasses toward the black horizon.

The guns boom faintly and the air above is filled with the low insistent rustling of the shells hurrying away to the targets, laden with death and destruction. Like a summer evening's concert of fireflies the 105's burst on the far hillside in little flickering pinpricks of light and soon their thunder rolls back, sharp and imperious, and beats against the rumble of the guns behind and through their quarrelling runs the shush-shush of the shells overhead like a long unbroken thread.

Confusion to the Layman

Then the 155's lend their booming bass to the outrageous concert and on the hillside across the way the big shells burst in a mad red glory of flame that hangs in the air interminably and dwarfs the impertinent noisy fireflies. To anyone but an artilleryman it is all confusion but the officers on the tower are pleased and they indicate between politely muffled yawns that the test was entirely successful.

On a river a few miles away the medical battalion has been struggling with a harrassment of its own. It has been sent out and told to establish a collecting station on the bank while the division theoretically is fighting on the other side. All bridges have been blown out and roads destroyed and the doctors fume and scratch their heads and swear unprofessionally while they devise rafts and other means to bring the casualties back.

Behind the First in the amphibious phase of its training, the Thirty-sixth Division is down by the side of a broad stream next day learning to clamber down cargo netting and to land from boats and go into action. In the absence of landing boats the men are using engineer assault boats and pontoons with long awkward oars which they manipulate with great unhandiness.

"These West Texas boys are mighty poor boatmen," explains a leather faced major, "but they're tryin'. Galveston kind of ran to the Marines and the Navy so we didn't get many from there. But these West Texas boys are right handy with a cow pony."

The West Texas boys scramble up a heavy rope cargo net draped over a narrow platform between two trees about 20 feet from the ground and perch there in full pack and tin hats and rifles while other West Texas boys maneuver the unhandy pontoons into position below. Then, with obvious distaste, a little frightened but game, they clamber down the other side, pile into the pontoons and are rowed out into the stream.

When all are out there, struggling with the high-sided pontoons in a high wind, missing collisions by miracles, but missing them, they get a signal and turn toward shore. Fifty yards apart "so one shell burst won't get more than one boat," they nose into the beach, the West Texas boys leap into knee deep water and splash ashore where they rush into position, lie down and snap their rifles belligerently.

No Dummy Guns Now

On the artillery range a section of infantry antitank guns is firing at a moving target. For more than a year these men drilled with dummy guns; they towed their dummies thousands of miles, wheeled them into position and out again, wondering what a real antitank gun looked like, how it sounded and how it felt when it replied with its joyous bark to pressure on the firing plunger. Now they have their guns and they are as delighted as any child with a new toy.

Their target is an ingenious arrangement of white cloth on a little car which runs on an oval track propelled by a gas engine. If they learn to hit that, and they do hit it most of the time, they can plant their shots where they please on a real tank, on a rivet seam, on the treads, on any vulnerable spot.

They are very polite, these Texas men, and their officer asks if you would like to fire the gun. The fellow firing now, he explains, is the company mess sergeant playing hooky from his kitchen. He "begged me to let him shoot the gun so I did and he's doin' right good."

When he has finished, you squat down beside the gun and peer through the remarkable sight which helps you lead the target to compensate for its motion. The section chief, a sunburned sergeant, looks through his glasses at the target and gives you the firing data in a matter of fact voice. Then:

"Fire at my command . . . oh, I beg pardon, sir . . . commence firing."

The target is speeding along now in the ring of the sight and you manipulate both hands frantically to bring the gun to bear. You think you've got it and you mash the plunger under your left hand and the gun says wham! and whisks by your right ear in recoil and you spot a flash of tracer but can't see where it went. It was high, says the sergeant, and you are anxious to get in another shot before the target runs beyond the safety limit and almost as soon as the lieutenant, who is loading, says "up," which means the piece is loaded, you fire again and lead too much and the tracer streaks ahead of the target.

Like the Boys Who Stopped Grant

You are very pleased with yourself and the gun, especially when you learn its shells are loaded with a new powder which greatly increases its striking power, and you think Texans are fine fellows. There's something big and calm about them and you find it easy to believe they stopped Grant in the Wilderness.

That night the Thirty-sixth puts on a demonstration for its recruits so they will be left with no illusions about the deadliness of a .30-caliber machine gun. The men are formed on the target range and every machine gun in the division is there, loaded with tracer ammunition. It is dark and the gunners are dim ghosts crouching over their weapons. An officer explains to the men what a machine gun is designed to do and says, "Now we'll show you."

At his command all the guns start stammering madly at once and a blazing curtain flashes from them to the target butts and the tracers sparkle and flash where they strike and ricochet in sputtering little meteors. The men stand silent and awed and are glad they don't have to walk into that deadly screen of flame and proud that their division can raise so much glittering hell in so small a space.

First and Thirty-sixth, the two divisions have written the history of today's Army in their 18 months of training. They have come a long way against disheartening odds, these regulars and these guardsmen, with the blood of the men of the Alamo and San Jacinto and Golind and Hood's Texicans in their veins.

You leave them with a light heart. You know this Army is going places.

Buy And Hold

A correspondent of The Post recently expressed a timely warning against the practice of buying war savings bonds and cashing them after a brief holding period. As he says, "we want to invest money that will be left with the Government long enough to do some good."

In a letter published Sunday in the New York Times, Prof. B. M. Anderson of the University of California uttered similar warnings in connection with a general criticism of the Treasury's borrowing policy. As he pointed out, the war savings bonds "become in effect demand deposits after a few months, with the Treasury obligated to make immediate payment at the request of the holder of the bonds." Consequently any further growth of this unfunded debt might prove very embarrassing to the Treasury. It almost certainly would give rise to heavy withdrawal demands if during the coming intensive sales campaign, individuals should be pressed to buy more bonds than they felt able or willing to hold. There is no questioning the reality of this danger. For even under present favorable conditions, Dr. Anderson notes that the daily Treasury statement shows substantial withdrawals of funds lent to the Government.

Of course, the attractive redemption provisions of the war savings bond issues have greatly aided their sale. The knowledge that funds invested in these bonds are almost as easy to obtain for emergency use as deposits in a savings bank is reassuring. It does not follow that bondholders will seek en masse to exercise their redemption rights, especially as they benefit by holding their bonds till maturity. Nevertheless the possibility of sudden large scale withdrawals is an ever-present danger that has to be taken into account in developing plans to increase public participation in bond sales.

Heavy withdrawals would not only reduce net revenue from bond sales, but would also defeat the Treasury's efforts to cut down consumer buying by drawing in current saved income. If people bought war bonds with the expectation of getting their money back within a few weeks or months, spending would continue as usual, and the fight against inflation would be seriously impeded.

War Prisoners

It requires no stretch of the imagination to picture the unfortunate lot of prisoners of war in enforced confinement even if they are well fed and well treated. They are all young and vigorous. Yet they have so much time on their hands and so little to do. The camps are thus breeding grounds of physical deterioration, mental stagnation, and spiritual collapse. That was the fear in the last war of Dr. John R. Mott, president of the World's Alliance of the Y. M. C. A. So the world's Y. M. C. A. got together, and organized a system of relief which eventually spread to all the belligerent countries.

One of the problems was to obtain access to the prisoners. There was no international ruling on the subject, and it was left to Y. M. C. A. statesmanship to obtain permission to get to the camps. It was an uphill task, but the effort eventually met with success. After the war this particular situation was remedied by an international convention signed in 1929. A sort of standard code was then negotiated which, aside from assuring access for international relief workers, laid down rules for sanitation, clothing and food.

Still the same need recurred in this war for the fine work of the Y. M. C. A. organization. Accordingly a new War Prisoners Aid was formed, and is now going back of the barbed wire with the aids and comforts which will sustain the morale of the war prisoners. All manner of fruitful ways of employing leisure time are organized: trades, sports and cultural interests. Along with the organization, which the Y. M. C. A. sets up for the prisoners themselves to run, the Y. M. C. A. supplies the tools and apparatus for these leisure time occupations. Moreover, it provides the opportunity for religious worship according to the prisoners' conscience.

Thus Dr. Mott, whose service to international understanding stretches back over half a century, is justified in feeling that this work is fundamental in conserving the values of our civilization. It is estimated that there are six million war prisoners, or as many as there were at the end of the last war. The program which the Y. M. C. A. has again undertaken is aimed at bringing to these men—the flower of their countries—the means of physical invigoration, mental enrichment and moral and spiritual growth which would otherwise be denied them in their durance vile.

"Quickie" Commissions

Representative Faddis of Pennsylvania, has proposed an amendment to the pending military pay bill which, in our opinion, constitutes an unwarranted infringement of War Department authority. He would force the department to stop issuing commissions to men who have had no previous military training. In theory, of course, this is a sound objective. For among other things, it would help free the department of political pressure in the award of commissions. But it would do so at the expense of the war effort. The Army's expanding administrative needs are so great that to insure maximum performance in the shortest possible time qualified civilians simply must be placed in positions of responsibility.

There are, to be sure, qualified officers already in the service who can fill these positions. But the paramount issue here is the intelligent utilization of available man power. Combat officers ought not to be sitting at desks—as they are now doing. They ought to be out in the field with the troops. Much of the Army's desk work can be, and indeed must be, done by the experienced civilians who have proved their capacity in private life. If the Army feels that such civilians should be awarded commissions commensurate with the importance of the work they are doing, then the Army should be free to grant recognition as it sees fit.

Much of the existing opposition to "quickie" commissions stems from the general impression that all you need in order to become an officer is a passable physique and "influence." Undoubtedly some civilians of dubious value to the Army have been given commissions. Regardless of whatever influence may have been exerted in their behalf, this was bound to happen when the Army was faced with its gigantic job of wartime expansion.

But it is a fact that, in spite of the pressing need for officers, commissions are now harder to get than they were. And presumably they will be still harder to get in the months ahead. Administrative lame ducks may possibly continue to slip into easy commissioned berths. But they will certainly be relatively few in number. In any case, the possibility of their presence hardly justifies legislative meddling in a personnel matter which is clearly the business of the War Department.

Mr. Murray's Case

The seven points in the President's anti-inflation program stand or fall together. That was the substance of Mr. Roosevelt's radio explanation. He said that some people were already taking the position that every one of the seven points was correct except the one point which steps on their individual toes. The cap fits Philip Murray. He professes complete devotion to the President and his war leadership, yet he talks of the stabilization of wages, or the one point out of the seven of most concern to the C. I. O. leader.

It may be granted that the stabilization of wages is an inexact term. But the War Labor Board, which is charged with the job of stabilizing wages, has already defined the President's objective. The board will continue to make upward wage adjustments to iron out inequalities and substandard pay situations. Beyond these situations the board will put a stop to further increases in wages now considered as standard. In other words, stabilization of wages means a freeze of standard wages. Yet Mr. Murray says he is "unalterably opposed" to a freeze, and he applies his opposition by reaffirming the steel workers' demand for a dollar a day increase. It would be a stretch of the imagination to say that the steel workers are either substandard or inequitably treated. Mr. Murray's attitude therefore clearly pits him against the President.

Mr. Murray's stand is of great importance in this critical stage of our war effort. He speaks in the role of head of one of the two great labor groups of this Nation. He knows what this war means for labor—either the right to work as freemen or condemnation to slavery in a tyrant's world. A man in his role at a time like the present might be expected to offer a statesmanlike example of support for the Commander in Chief. Maybe that is Mr. Murray's predilection. It would be interesting to know what stand was taken in this matter by the C. I. O.'s legal adviser, Lee Pressman. Mr. Pressman is an astute politician of no mean capacity. And the fact must be faced that Mr. Murray is the titular head of an organization which is bedeviled by domestic politics. He has constantly to fight for his leadership against the man who made him and who is now out to knife him, John L. Lewis.

It is this kind of sabotage which, judging from Mr. Murray's emotional outbursts last weekend, seems to be wearing down the C. I. O. leader. Certainly the organizational feud in which he is thrust must mar the leadership which he might otherwise be able to give in support of the President. It is an ugly, even a rotten, situation. Yet the President must face the logic of Mr. Murray's opposition. Hitherto he has supported Mr. Murray, and that support has been a powerful reinforcement for Mr. Murray in his internecine strife with Mr. Lewis. But the absence of any reciprocity from Mr. Murray cannot be ignored at the White House. So much is at stake that the President must rise above the men who are prisoners of their own group squabbles and seek his support from the American people for his all-embracing program. That program stands or falls together. So does America.

Non-Co-operation

It would be easy to misconstrue the effect of the All-Indian Congress Party's resolution on Japan. The party went on record as advising the people of India to oppose any invasion by Japan only by "nonviolent non-co-operation." That does not mean either that the war effort in India has slowed down or that India will not fight. On the contrary, in both respects India is very much on the defensive against Japan. Enlistments are proceeding at a maximum rate consistent with assimilation into the army. Many more than the present 50,000 a month could be obtained if there were the equipment for them. As it is, the Indian army has grown from 170,000 to a million men, and they are reported to be eager to give a good account of themselves. Moreover, Indian war industry is working night and day. There are no slowdowns, no difficulty has been experienced from strikes, and the result is that in all categories of arms output is ahead of schedule.

The fact is that the Congress party, though influential, does not speak either for all India or even for the Hindu population. The paid-up membership is a million and a half. They represent the urban intelligentsia, who number only about a fifteenth of India's 400 million people. If the women and children and the non-Hindu population be subtracted, that would leave about 10 million who would follow the Congress party's leadership.

Furthermore, the resolution is not tantamount to assistance of the invader, as some suggest. The Congress party's counsel is for resistance, though passive. And such resistance must be offered "even if we have to die in an effort to resist him." The Japanese are not likely to be aided by this kind of non-co-operation; in fact, they would be hindered in precisely the same way that the Nazis are hindered in occupied Europe.

To be sure, the attitude of the Congress party, after the brave words of defiance by Mr. Nehru and the organs of the Congress party, is pusillanimous. And the attitude to justify it on the grounds of India's tie with Britain will persuade nobody. Even under the original Cripps proposals India could have had a status which in fact would have spelled freedom. All the fuss about Britain's retention of the office of commander in chief makes little sense when it is borne in mind that in other respects there would have been complete Indianization of the Viceroy's cabinet. How, with Indians in control of finance, labor, commerce and supplies, could a commander in chief have pursued an independent policy? To ask the question is to answer it. Independence for the commander in chief would have been impossible. The reason that the Congress party rejected the Cripps proposals becomes plain in the light of the pacifist resolution: it did not want the responsibility of running India while the invader was at the gate.

THE FAIR YOUNG MEN

The fair young men today are taking wings:
They climb the clouds of heaven's wilderness
Beyond all hope of little frightened things
Whose yearnings cannot break the earth's duress.

Their sun-bright pinions overhead confess
Such shining spendor as no throne-fled kings
Have owned the sceptred power to possess.
The fair young men today are taking wings!

They break the shackles worn by underlings
Who plod the mole-ridged land and cry redress
For craven spirits when the death-gate swings;
They climb the clouds of heaven's wilderness.

The world will need its heroes, none the less
In peaceful times as now, when trumpetings
Have ushered in the days of our distress
Beyond all hope of little frightened things.

The world makes way for valiant voyagings,
For stalwart souls, that so she may progress
To that great goal some little poet sings
Whose yearnings cannot break the earth's duress.

Sing, then, in praise of valor, and express
One hope that echoes where the iris springs:
Stretch forth Thy hand, O God; uphold and bless
With high-born courage through their journeyings,

Miltonic Advice

The Englishman and the American have not only furnished the Axis with all its main military weapons—Winston Churchill's tanks, Stonewall Jackson's "blitz" attacks, American airplanes, submarines and dive-bombers. But they have also furnished the Axis with another all-powerful instrument for defeating its enemies. It is a mere sentence, something which sums up the truth about propaganda, the Axis specialty. It was said by one of the greatest pamphleteers of history, once the secretary of Oliver Cromwell. His name was John Milton—and the sentence was: "The pen is mightier than the sword."

How seriously the Axis takes this bit of wisdom of Milton's—how much more seriously than its enemies do!—is evidenced in the gigantic ministry of propaganda and information in Berlin, headed by Goebbels and staffed by hosts of experts in the field of history, psychology, sociology, "philosophy," advertising men, etc., and supplied with virtually unlimited sums of money. It spends nearly as much money as does the military end of the Axis.

I haven't seen the great building which houses this organization, and I doubt that it is inscribed by that line from one of the greatest of England's poets, and her chief and earliest champion of civil liberties—but above its portals should be engraved these words: "The pen is mightier than the sword." And just beneath those words should be inscribed Hitler's perpetual admonition to his henchmen all over the world: "Continue propaganda."

Federal Hours

Government clerks are recruited from all parts of the country, some of them having made long trips to get to Washington. When they get here they are put to work counting papers, sorting numbers and other routine. There is no glamour in this. It is just plain drudgery.

There is a 40-hour week which is the law of the land, and just why this 40-hour week should not apply to Government clerks, who are just as much workers as anyone else and just as much part of the war effort, I cannot understand. The Government clerk works eight hours a day six days a week, or 48 hours at the same rate of pay that he would get for 40 hours only.

What is gained by exacting eight extra hours from the clerks again. I can't understand, except that those clerks who do continue will become nervous wrecks.

War Of Rights

As our President is desirous of a name for the present war that will include all countries at war, may I submit my suggestion: War of Rights.

Most certainly the United States is at war to preserve her Bill of Rights; Germany, for her rights to regain her lost territory and to dominate other countries; Japan for her rights to obtain additional territory. The rights of all countries can be further determined.

$25,000 A Year

On May 2 there appeared in The Post a letter from a person who signed himself "Observer." This letter praised the President for his measure suggesting, or rather demanding, that incomes be limited to $25,000 per year. In the same breath in which the "Observer" advocates the adoption of this measure he says that by more similar reforms the "issue" will be destroyed. "Observer" does not seem to realize that this measure and other similar ones are closely allied to all "isms." The Communists must have enjoyed reading the "Observer's" letter. They've been trying to put a maximum limit on salaries.

A temporary curb on high salaries may prove to be a good thing. The good effects will probably overbalance the evil ones if the setup is temporary and if it is known by the public to be only a temporary measure.

As a permanent law the effects would be disastrous. By passing such a law the Government would only lead itself to destruction. Let us use an example. Take a man like Henry Ford who has built the Ford company into an industry which provides the necessities and luxuries of life for thousands of Americans. A salary of $25,000 per year would be a mere pittance for the work which Henry Ford has done, especially when one considers the millions of dollars his employes are receiving in their pay envelopes each week. It was Ford's genius that provided work for these people. Had Ford been willing to just take things easy and earn a living in some other way, thousands of people, good American people, would not be receiving the high salaries which Ford pays his employes. This would be true of all the big industries in the United States. Ambition would be stifled. Many men with great minds or potentially great minds would not consider it worthwhile to work and struggle and plan.

Take away the big industrialists and you take away the big industries. The only other alternative is to have the Government take over the industries and there you will have in America the "isms" which Mr. "Observer" wishes to have destroyed.

Canadian Conscription

The vote in Canada's plebiscite last Monday has untied the government's hands. The two to one "yes" vote, with the half-million soldier vote to be added May 5, has given the all-clear signal for a total war effort. That is the view of those who favor total war.

But that is very far from the view of the Canadian government.

"Conscription if and when the government decides it is necessary," summarizes the government's attitude. Well-organized, high-pressure, "voluntary" enlistment campaigns will continue.

Quebec has said "no" to any departure by the government from its "no-conscription-for-overseas-service pledge." But in addition to Quebec's heavy "no" vote, the "no" vote of other provinces rolls up a substantial total.

There is little prospect, therefore, that the Canadian government will alter the "Let-George-do-it" policy followed up to the present in regard to war man power. Canada has had no Pearl Harbor. We continue cautiously. We shall adopt conscription of man power for overseas service only "if and when the government decides it is necessary."

A Commuter Considers His Plight

5:15 p. m., Eastern War Time. We arrived at the street corner where the commuters from our office take the buses to the suburban communities in Virginia. About a dozen were already there, hopefully waiting. Several buses passed, loaded to the doors. Half an hour went by, then two buses stop, taking about eight of the dozen. Our buses are still loaded to capacity and do not stop. Another 15 minutes, and two more of the group are able to squeeze on.

An hour passed. Some of the girls are getting desperate. They alternately joked or reproached the world in general. They stamped their feet when the buses passed without any indication of stopping. The bus drivers only laughed and waved their hands.

Many private cars passed, a large number with only the driver. They were going to the same localities. Some would have been willing to take one or more passengers. If only we had some way of getting together.

An hour and 15 minutes. The girls were about in tears. Five minutes more, a bus stopped and the girls squeezed on. No room for more. Ten minutes more, and we were able to squeeze on another bus. We stood up all the way to near the end of the line. It took two hours to complete a one-half hour trip.

A five-minute walk and we were home. Home being a hot little compartment for which we pay rents 50 per cent higher than anywhere else in the country. The rental agent was outside, and we asked him rather lamely if we were to have any relief in accordance with the recent ruling of the OPA. He answered very blandly that none of his property will be affected by the ruling. He did not know that we know that the rents have been raised $20 monthly since the first of the year. But he probably knows that the buck-passing game between the OPA, the Governor of Virginia, the county officials and the local moguls will result in nothing more than hard feelings all around. Already the local moguls say wait 60 days and see what happens, knowing full well that nothing will happen unless someone with authority forces the issue.

No use griping or grousing unless one can offer some suggestion that might solve some small phase of the problem that confronts us. Here is one suggestion that came out of the long wait on the street corner.

(1) Issue weekly to each commuter, who will apply and who will attest to the fact that he is a commuter, a book of 12 gasoline rationing tickets weekly. Each ticket worth 0.2 gallon of gasoline at any station. Books to be issued to each commuter, regardless of car ownership.

(2) Each car driver to carry a sign indicating the locality of his destination, and be willing to pick up passengers for that locality at the price of one ticket each. The V-for-victory signal to be used by commuters desiring rides. The car drivers who refuse to pick up passengers would find themselves without sufficient gasoline to operate his car throughout the week. The driver who carries the maximum possible number of passengers would find himself with sufficient tickets for his Sunday trips and possibly enough for occasional long trips. He has earned them.

(3) The commuters would pay for the tickets at the rate of 10 cents each. Any excess amounts collected over the cost of administering the plan could be allocated to the war effort, perhaps toward the purchasing of a bomber.

Carefree Australia

Australia is much in the news—Australian books are being read and Australian history being investigated in America. I knew Australia many years ago and have not visited it since World War I. From the books I have been reading it is evident that much has developed. Travel by air has brought the interior of Australia into the limelight. Only intrepid explorers knew anything about such regions in my day. De Rougement said he rode on huge turtles and found a black native race who used golden utensils to cook with, but De Rougement after a brief period of notoriety was proclaimed a fraud and no one credited his yarns. I wonder if there was a soupcon of truth in his stories. A recent film shows gold being mined in primitive fashion certainly, at Marble Bar, right in the center of the continent.

As to the native races, one heard little and saw practically nothing of them in the towns; they were at the back of beyond, and fast dying out, one learned. Yet in the recent film mentioned, one saw aborigines working usefully, and dancing something in their hours off, something very like the rumba and the conga—and apparently enjoying themselves mightily.

The only Australian aboriginal I ever saw was on board a cattle boat. He was a cannibal who had killed and eaten his mate and was being taken down the west coast, to be tried for his crime at Perth. He was chained to the deck and seemed absolutely without intelligence. He told his keeper, however, that the spirit of his friend sat on his chest day and night . . . Conscience or indigestion, who can say? I was told that he would be judged insane and kept under observation. One might say poetic justice had made the punishment fit the crime.

In these days of long ago life was very pleasant. Bushranging days were over, though I can remember old people talking of the Kelly gang and one saw their effigies in the waxworks. Coaches still ran to some upcountry towns and railways were being developed slowly. Modern books give many statistics but few detailed descriptions. Details paint pictures on paper. What a land for picnics it was—weather conditions almost always to be depended upon. Each person brought homemade provender. Off we went to some fern gully-fairyland. Tree ferns as high as a house, their graceful fronds making grateful shade from the hot sun—a creek near to fish for "yabbies" (minute crayfish), potatoes baked in woodashes. Tea, of course, "Billy tea," strong and sweet whether one "took" sugar or not. Stirred with a "gum," eucalyptus, stick and many good things to eat; simple withal. Australian women are the best cooks of pastry, cakes, preserves. All ingredients used are pure. No substitutes or "phoney" quick methods employed.

There was a period of depression I remember when people were poor who had been well off. Then it was that the excellent tea and lunch rooms sprang into being. Such sandwiches, such layer cakes, such patties and pies, such fruit and light luncheons were sold and served that my mouth waters at the recollection. The girls who worked and waited were the girls who cooked, and who, when the day's work was done, went home to bathe and change and probably to attend "parties" gaily—or to visit their friends. One found one's neighbors sitting on their lawns. No one seemed afraid of catching a chill from sitting on grass. No cocktails, but fruit and cake and cool drinks were offered. No frigidaire existed to raid but people conserved block ice wrapped in newspaper and flannel and kept in cellars in zinc-lined boxes and the butter, water and milk nestled close to it. Hop beer was often served and ginger pop, too, both homemade. Mosquitoes might worry but they were not the dangerous kind. They were very partial to newcomers, especially from England, and a new chum looked as though he had the measles until the mosquitoes got used to him and he ceased to be a novelty. My father used to say, "Take a good fat baby to bed with you, and the mosquitoes won't touch you."

An English aunt visiting us said, "All your front doors seem open night and day," and I really think they were. On hot nights one frequently roamed about in scanty attire. One night a burglar took all the coats that were hanging in the hall. We all heard him apparently. I thought it was father, father thought it was Jack, Jack thought it was Mary having a tidying fit, and Mary after a strenuous day and night baking and swimming and dancing, slept and did not think at all.

In the morning the theft discovered, the local police informed, an officer on our beat remarked: "Oh, I saw a man carrying a lot of coats. He came out of your back yard about midnight and I said to him, "It is a hot night to be carting so much, mate," and he agreed.

"Yer right, I guess I'll dump some here and come back later; you might keep an eye on them. I'm taking them to my uncles."

So we regained some of our property, as he never came back. Until colder weather arrived the whole affair seemed a joke. Every one was so happy-go-lucky, life so simple.

Besides dancing, our chief joy was a country race meeting. One rode or drove over, took lunch, backed one's fancy probably in half crowns (50 cents) and if the course allowed, followed the horses round part of the distance on foot. Everyone goes to the races in Australia. Not merely the racing crowd as in America. The butcher, the baker, the mayor, grandmothers, grandfathers, professors, three-card trick men, peas and thimble crooks, pretty ladies, the boys, shop girls, the family.

In the capitals of the states the big race meetings are social events and very dressy affairs. The Governor arriving in state with escort. Every party getting up sweepstakes among themselves. Great excitement during the race and after, when the stakes are paid. No one is much richer or much poorer. This gambling is sport and for fun, not "filthy lucre." In the days I speak of, Adam Lindsay Gordon was the poet best loved and best known.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

European War At The Political Level

IN HIS ORDER of the day on May first Stalin said that the Red army is "fighting a war for the fatherland, a war of liberation, a just war. We have no such aims as the occupation of foreign countries, the subjugation of other peoples." A close reading of the whole text of this significant declaration shows that Stalin expressly meant to say to the Finns and to the Germans, as well as to the Hungarians and Rumanians, that the defeat of the German army and the downfall of the Nazi regime would not be followed by Russian military occupation of these "foreign countries."

LIPPMANN

Though the effect of this statement of Russian war aims will not be obvious and visible for some time, it is none the less of great practical importance, both immediately and in the longer run. Thus it is notice to the Finns that Finland is to survive a Nazi debacle and that, therefore, it is the vital interest of Finland to make sure that when hostilities end, there is still a Finnish army and a not utterly exhausted Finnish nation. Every one knows that Finland cannot today make a separate peace and withdraw from the war. But the fact that Russia, and obviously also Britain and America, intend to respect the national independence of Finland, is the best of all reasons why Finland should, like Italy for example, try to conserve her resources until the war is over. Finland has every interest in not ruining herself fighting Hitler's war.

THE SAME practical calculation holds true for the Hungarians and the Rumanians, and there are many reasons for thinking they are well aware of it. They are compelled, not for noble but for understandable reasons, to help Hitler by sending troops to Russia and even to placate him by taking the preposterous step of declaring war against the United States. But both have insisted on keeping an army at home, and this is a shrewd precaution against the time when the Nazi military power breaks up and anarchy is threatened along the German lines of communication to the East. If Hungary and Rumania have armies intact, which at the proper moment are ready to liberate their countries from the Nazi captivity, they will have done the best that is possible for their two countries.

Indeed the first political problem of Europe—now and immediately after the downfall of Hitler—is how each nation is to have enough force and enough governmental authority within its own territory—first, to contribute to its own liberation, then to preserve domestic order and then to insure its proper representation in the resettlement of the continent. In the case of Italy the problem is readily soluble in so far as the Italians do not let Mussolini exhaust and destroy the Italian naval and land forces in Hitler's war. For when the time comes to remove Mussolini and his henchmen, the King and the House of Savoy, the army, the Vatican will remain to make negotiations possible. In the case of France the liberation will be carried out by the French nation, rising up to join their old allies—the British and the Americans. Until that event is ready, the future of France depends upon a national resistance to all attempts to sell the French forces to Hitler. For the future of France depends upon retaining and enlarging and eventually re-equipping the armed forces of France.

THE GERMAN PROBLEM is by all odds the most difficult both for the Germans and for ourselves. Stalin's declaration that the Red army will not occupy Germany deals with only one aspect of the German problem as Germans are bound to see it.

They are on the verge of knowing, though nothing can be known conclusively until the battles of this summer have been fought, that Hitler cannot impose his order on the United Nations. They know that Hitler can never negotiate a peace and bring the war to an end, and even assuming the worst conceivable from the Allied point of view, probably not even to a truce. For one reason, it is impossible to negotiate with Hitler; more conclusively, Hitler—as the Germans must know best of all—can never demobilize the German war machine and must therefore make war until he cannot make war any longer.

THEREFORE, the German problem in its most immediate form is what happens to the German people if Hitler is overthrown, if the army is destroyed, or if both these things happen. Unlike Italy, there is no legitimate government in Germany with which the Allies could, if they were willing, negotiate. Unlike Italy, the Nazis have implicated the German nation in crimes against their neighbors which have sown the seeds of a terrible revenge.

The Goebbels propaganda to the German nation is based on these two evident facts—that there is no obvious alternative to Hitler and that the Germans are hated bitterly from one end of Europe to the other. It would be stupid to deny that these things are true, and since they are true, it follows that the war will go on until it seems far worse to the Germans to fight for Hitler than to quit and face the consequences of Hitlerism.

THE QUESTION is whether there is as regards Germany a closed circle which can be broken only by total violence. It is plain that the United Nations cannot invent a German government with which they could afford to negotiate peace. It is equally plain that the primary problem of the provisional government which replaces Hitler will be to purge itself of the hatreds which it will inherit from Hitler. For certainly there can be no peace which will last if it is based on revenge. But on the other hand, there will be revenge until somehow the people of Europe, the near neighbors of Germany, have the conviction that the purge is complete.

This is the crucial difficulty. Perhaps all that can be said usefully about it at this stage of the war is that, as regards Germany, these matters will have to be settled before hostilities can end. These matters include the establishment of a new, though provisional government, the liquidation of the Nazi crimes in the occupied territories, and the purge which is essential if Europe is not to be haunted forever by the memories of the Nazi terror. In Germany's case, unlike that of any of her European allies, these radical events will have to take place before even an armistice, not to speak of a peace settlement, could be negotiated.

Trade-Mark Infringement

Redress Upheld

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday in a 4-to-3 decision that if a trade mark is infringed "the profits made on sales of goods bearing the infringing mark properly belong to the owner of the mark."

Justice Frankfurter delivered the opinion. It reversed a circuit court ruling that profits should be restricted to sales to purchasers who were induced to buy because they believed the goods to be those of the trade-mark owner and who otherwise would have bought the trade-marked product.

"Infringement and damage having been found," Frankfurter said, "the act requires the trade-mark owner to prove only the sale of articles bearing the infringing mark. . . ."

Justice Black wrote a dissenting opinion, in which Justices Douglas and Murphy concurred. They contended that the effect of the majority stand is to "grant a windfall."

Chief Justice Stone and Justice Roberts did not participate.

THE OPINION was on a suit brought by the Mishawaka Rubber & Woolen Manufacturing Co. of Mishawaka, Ind., charging that its trade mark for rubber heels had been infringed by the S. S. Kresge Co.

The Mishawaka company said the Eastern Michigan Federal District Court and the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals had held the trade mark infringed but had incorrectly restricted the accounting of profits.

The Supreme Court in another decision upheld action of the Interstate Commerce Commission which had the effect of sustaining yardage charges by the Union Stock Yards & Transit Co. of Chicago on direct carload shipments of livestock to the Chicago Union Stock Yards.

IN ARGUMENTS before the Court later in the day Secretary Wickard was accused of having "encouraged farmers to exceed their acreage quotas" before Congress increased from 15 to 49 cents a bushel the penalty on wheat produced in excess of AAA quotas.

This contention was made by Harry N. Routzohn, Dayton, Ohio, attorney, in challenging the constitutionality of Congressional action May 26, 1941, increasing the penalty and imposing a lien on a farmer's entire crop to assure the payment.

Routzohn criticized a radio speech by Wickard last May 19 in which the Secretary urged wheat farmers to vote for quotas at a referendum to be held the following May 31. The Secretary was quoted as saying:

"Because of the uncertain world situation, we deliberately planted several million extra acres of wheat this year. . . . Farmers should not be penalized because they have provided insurance against shortages of food."

ROUTZOHN asserted that the Secretary's speech was "misleading," because the farmers were not told that the penalty was to be increased within a few days. The attorney also said that the penalty increase came only five days before the referendum and this gave the farmers inadequate time to inform themselves as to the facts so they could vote intelligently.

Another contention was that the increase was retroactively applied to the crop planted in the fall of 1940 and that this made it invalid.

Solicitor General Charles Fahy contended that the Secretary's speech was "not in any way misleading." He asserted also that the penalty provisions did not apply until after the harvesting of the crop and hence were not retroactive.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Man Power Going To Waste

THE PRESENCE of idle men in Washington is the most pointed indication that we are not yet making the most effective use of our man power. Idle men are an anomaly anywhere in time of war. That is doubly true, however, in an overcrowded Capital. For the unemployed worker who comes here and contributes nothing to the war effort occupies space that is desperately needed for the new personnel of the War and Navy Departments.

PUSEY

It is true, of course, that a large number of men who have come here in recent months have found work. Stenographers and typists are being absorbed as fast as they report to employment offices. And the demand for certain skilled construction workers exceeds the supply. The District Employment Center placed 6685 individuals in jobs in April, topping all previous records. Still the fact remains that this overcrowded city is a haven for some idlers and some who are eager to work but have no jobs.

The WPA has a list of only 470 persons declared eligible for relief work who have not been placed. It is reasonable to assume that some of these have found work without notifying the WPA. On the other hand, some unemployed do not consider it worth while to apply for WPA assistance because that organization is sharply contracting its activities. A better index to unemployment here is the active file of the Employment Center, which shows that 13,616 persons were seeking jobs in Washington at the end of April. This is a sharp decline from the 25,444 persons asking for help in securing jobs a year ago. We must remember also that this number includes 2295 WPA employes and some others who are working and looking for better jobs. At the same time the city has a good many idlers who are not registered with the Employment Center. However, we look at it, there are in Washington too many men and women who are contributing nothing to either the war effort or to civilian activities.

A CONSIDERABLE number of jobseekers are still flocking into the city from other parts of the country, chiefly from Virginia and Maryland, New York and North Carolina. Of 7141 applicants for work at the Employment Center in a two-month period this spring 2991 came from the States. Some of these undoubtedly live in Maryland and Virginia suburbs, but the great majority came here to take a chance on finding a job. That miscellaneous migration gives the new War Man Power Commission a formidable problem in its own front yard.

President Roosevelt took note of this critical situation some weeks ago when he called upon "parasites" to leave Washington for the duration. But the President stirred up resentment instead of inducing cooperation or suggesting a practical approach to the dilemma. His remarks led some voteless Washingtonians to fear that they might be ousted from their homes and exiled as parasites. The result was to leave the impression that little can be done to relieve dangerous overcrowding in the Capital without great injustice to local residents.

OF COURSE, the first step to be taken is to stop the migration into Washington of families that have no employment here and no contribution to make to the war effort. That would, in some measure, ease the pressure on housing accommodations, restaurants and so forth. And it would work a hardship on no one. Certainly people have no inherent right to overcrowd this hard-working city in time of war merely to satisfy their curiosity or some vague desire to live in the Capital.

To be sure, the exclusion of workers for whom there is no demand here would not be an easy job. How it shall be done is for the War Man Power Commission and perhaps local officials to decide. But there is no question that it should be done. The exclusion of nonwar workers from the human stream flowing into the Capital of the United Nations might well be one of the first tasks to be undertaken by Administrator McNutt's new agency.

The second logical step would be to make effective use of those who are already here occupying valuable space, but doing no work. There is no need to smear them with the term "parasites." Most of them can help win the war and will be willing to do so if they are given an opportunity. But it is evident that many of them cannot be advantageously placed in the Government service. Why, then, shouldn't they be mobilized for work on the farm or wherever the demand for labor arises? It is estimated that the neighboring State of Maryland needs 10,000 additional farmhands this year. Many of the families flocking to Washington and others who are already here living in cramped and filthy slums would be far better off on farms. Indeed, many of them are trained only for farm work. It is a national crime to continue crowding them into Washington slums when their services are urgently needed elsewhere.

ONE STEP that would be of great help in this connection would be the enforcement of reasonable rules against overcrowding of living quarters here. When overcrowding is necessary to house warworkers it can be tolerated. But there is no excuse for allowing six families to be jammed into a six-room house when their presence here merely creates a health menace and adds nothing whatever to the war effort. There is, of course, a delicate human problem in enforcing regulations against such dangerous conditions. But if the Man Power Commission went no further than to offer work on the farm or elsewhere to families living here under these circumstances, some progress toward the solution of the two critical problems could doubtless be made.

Outright drafting of men for farm work and other tasks essential to the winning of this war may become necessary. After all, the drafting of men for work that must be done is a mild step compared to conscription of citizens to fight at the front. But voluntary placement of men where they can serve best may well be given a trial before resorting to compulsion. In either event, that systematic placement may well begin where overcrowding as well as war production problems can be eased by better use of our man power.

White House Garden

"Washington—There will be no Victory vegetable garden in the White House grounds, Mrs. Roosevelt announced today. 'The Agricultural Department experts checked the soil and found it full of rubble,' Mrs. Roosevelt explained."—News Item.

* * * *

"Well, this disappoints us. There was something fascinating about the idea of the First Lady raising a vegetable garden on the White House grounds. We would see her all set to plant the lettuce . . . only to be called suddenly to address a Youth Conference in Pasadena or Fort Lauderdale.

* * * *

We would see her back again, starting on her beans . . . and then . . . whisko! . . . off to New Orleans or Cincinnati right in the midst of things!

* * * *

Then we pictured her getting home, donning slacks and starting to set out the tomato plants. There would be her 10:35 tomatoes, so named because she had to quit them to catch that train, and her 1:11 tomatoes, named for the express to Chicago.

* * * *

We could imagine her starting to spray the spuds for potato bugs . . . and getting only one or two of the darned things because she had to dash to Washington Square, New York. Ultimately we knew she would have to make the great decision . . . to rush through her newspaper column and go to Boston for a talk to the Ladies Club for better Government or to reprint an old column by request and go after the cutworms in an all-out battle.

* * * *

Along about August we imagined the President inquiring, "Eleanor, how about some of our own home-grown spinach?"

"What spinach?" we fancied the First Lady replying, dimly recalling something of the sort.

"The spinach you were going to raise."

"Oh, that. Nothing ever came of it, Franklin."

"Why not, my dear?"

"I just never could arrange with the railroads or airplane lines to weed and water the stuff for me," we thought we heard Mrs. Roosevelt explain.

In Convention

Guard Youth, Roosevelt Asks P.-T.A.

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., May 4.—Encouraged by President Roosevelt, the national congress of parents and teachers energized its program for the protection of children in wartime, at the opening business sessions of its annual convention today.

The President, in a message called on the congress to "increase your efforts to help improve the schools, the bed-rock of democracy, and to help surround the children of America with every possible safeguard."

"Today," he wired, "when the whole world is in turmoil and when democracy is being assailed, you have greater opportunities than ever before to render service."

Fear for Youth's Gains

Turning the request into action, Mrs. William Kletzer of Portland, Oreg., told the delegates the P.-T. A. plan must be pushed "with greater consecration and efficiency than ever before."

Mrs. Kletzer cautioned the congress not to allow the national crisis to be used as an instrument to reduce gains won for education and youth. Existing child labor standards must be maintained, she said.

There has been a large increase in the number of labor permits issued to minors, she said. "And that should give us pause. In many States the increase has been over 300 per cent."

"We must be certain that the adult labor pool has been exhausted and that racial discrimination is not holding out of the market a large force of available adult labor," she warned.

Teacher Shortage Cited

She reported there was great danger that "hundreds, perhaps thousands," of rural schools would be unable to open this fall because of a teacher shortage.

"Rural teachers have given up trying to live on the meager salaries we have allowed them. They find a greater reward and even more honor in working at semiskilled jobs in war industries."

Captain McCloy, who has been stationed here since October, 1939, has recently been officer in charge of the personnel office at the naval operating base.

D. C. Woman Made Vice President of Senior Hadassah

Roanoke, Va., May 4 (AP).—Mrs. E. J. Evans of Durham, N. C., was elected president of the Seaboard region of Hadassah today at a luncheon session which closed the twentieth joint annual conference of the Zionist organization of America and of Hadassah.

The Zionist group concluded its sessions last night, but the Junior and senior Hadassah organizations met this morning.

Other Hadassah officers elected were: Vice presidents, Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Rosenberg, Roanoke; Mrs. Sam Levine, Norfolk, and Mrs. Louis Ashman, Baltimore; recording secretaries, Mrs. Leon Kroll Gutman, Charlotte, N. C.; treasurer; Mrs. Benjamin Kader, Baltimore. Louis E. Spiegler of Washington was reelected president of the Zionist Seaboard region, and Isadore Hershfield of Washington was named honorary president, at the afternoon session yesterday.

Joseph W. Spector, of Baltimore, was elected chairman of the administrative committee.

Rabbi Isadore Breslau of Washington, former executive director of the Zionist organization of America, told the delegates yesterday that mankind today is paying in the current war for sins of the past.

Man Power Problem

Fewer Professionals

ALTHOUGH INSTITUTIONS of higher learning have accomplished a remarkable "change-over" during the last few months to meet war needs, they will graduate fewer than 200,000 young men and women into the professional man power resources of the Nation this year, according to the American Council on Education.

The council, under the direction of Dr. C. S. Marsh, surveyed the prospective graduate field at the request of the National Roster of Scientific and Specialized Personnel. More than 1000 institutions were queried.

A total of 145,187 students will be graduated by early 1943 with training in the occupations listed by the roster. To these can be added 27,093 graduate students who will complete courses.

ONLY A SMALL NUMBER of these are in training in the various fields of medicine, astronomy, geography and meteorology, the survey showed. Other fields in which the roster previously noted shortages—including chemistry, accounting and auditing, physics, psychology, foreign languages and journalism—have a "fair quota" of students, it was noted.

"There will be graduated in 1942 in these schools only 19 specialists in industrial medicine," Dr. Marsh said, "only 6 neurologists, only 35 psychiatrists, only 14 radiologists, only 14 specialists in tropical medicine and parasitology, only 37 astronomers, only 53 metallurgical chemists, 127 marine engineers, and 167 radio engineers."

Approximately half of the number graduated will be women, and "there is some indication that women are training in almost all occupational fields," Dr. Marsh said, adding that "many occupations, however, still show a determined preference for one of the other of the sexes."

Bomber Bases Open to U. S. 500 Miles From Japan

New York, May 4 (AP).—Chinese bases for American flying fortresses and lesser bombers are now available 500 miles from Japan's industrial centers and right on the flank of Japanese shipping lanes, Owen Lattimore, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, says in the June American Magazine to be released tomorrow.

"Americans who say 'If only the Russians would let us use Vladivostock' overlook the fact that China has bases within 500 miles of the Japanese city of Nagasaki, and within flying fortress range of Tokyo itself," Littimore writes.

"When we supply the planes China will supply the place for them to work."

Alcohol Distillers Told to Speed Up War Production

The Government ordered beverage alcohol distillers yesterday to devote 75 days of their remaining 1942 production to meeting war demands for industrial alcohol.

This output of so-called "high wines," running 120 to 140 proof, will amount to more than 25 per cent of the distilleries production in the remaining eight months of this year.

It will be shipped to industrial alcohol plants for redistillation into 190 proof industrial alcohol required for explosives manufacture.

The War Production Board order was accompanied by announcement that 40 beverage distilleries in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Kentucky would ship high wines in May to six firms capable of producing industrial alcohol. Last month 26 distilleries in Kentucky and Maryland shipped high wines to two industrial alcohol plants.

Rubber Reclaimers Win Pay Rise, Waive DoubleTime

Buffalo, May 4 (AP).—A contract, providing a 7 cents an hour wage increase and waiving double time pay for Sundays and holidays, has been signed by the United States Rubber Reclaiming Co., Inc., and the C. I. O. United Rubber Workers Union, company and union officials disclosed today.

Charles E. Lanning, international union representative, said the increase, affecting 350 production workers and retroactive to January 1, 1942, boosts minimum pay rates to 76 cents an hour.

Time and a half pay for Sunday and holiday work, paid vacations and seniority rights also are provided, Lanning reported.

Hill, Norris Defend TVA In Funds Fight

By the Associated Press

Senators Hill (Democrat), Alabama, and Norris (Independent), Nebraska, asserted in the Senate yesterday that proposed changes in the financial procedure of the Tennessee Valley Authority would "seriously impede, if not destroy," TVA's part in the war effort.

Challenged by Senators McKellar and Stewart (Democrats), Tennessee, who asserted the only effect of the changes would be to make TVA "responsible to Congress," Mr. Hill declared it was imperative that TVA retain the use of its power receipts to meet war emergencies.

Mr. McKellar, ranking member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, is advocating amendments to restrict TVA expenditures to funds appropriated by Congress.

He revised yesterday his amendment to require TVA to pay the next fiscal year's power receipts to the Treasury monthly, adding a provision reappropriating for TVA's use in the next fiscal year an unexpended balance from the current year's appropriations expected to be left over on June 30. This amount is expected to be about 30 million dollars.

"That is an improvement in the Senator's position," Mr. Hill remarked, "but the Senator should go ahead and agree that TVA needs all of the power revenues it takes in next year to meet emergencies."

Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois interrupted Mr. Hill to ask why, "all of a sudden," it was decided to change TVA's procedure.

He said the proposals, in time of war, "have no merit."

"I want some one to put his finger on one thing in this amendment that would injure the war effort," Mr. Stewart said.

Examples Cited

Mr. Hill said he had many examples of cases where TVA would be delayed by having to go to Congress for appropriations for a substation, for a transmission line or for repair of facilities which might be injured by storm or sabotage.

Senator Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky said if TVA were limited to Congressional appropriations, based on estimates that had to be made up many months in advance of their receipt by the agency, the Authority could never guarantee to any industry to be able to supply adequate power over a long period.

Senators Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia and McKellar contended that the General Accounting Office had never been able to make a full audit of TVA accounts—a contention disputed by opponents of the amendments.

Mr. Barkley and others are expected to speak today.

School Girls Expecting to Do Their Part in War Must Put More Emphasis on Practical Subjects

CULTURAL training must give way to more practical subjects if the young schoolgirl expects to do her part in the war effort or find a place for herself in the postwar world. So declared Miss Caroline Ruutz-Rees, guest speaker yesterday on the information hour luncheon program of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Miss Ruutz-Rees, a founder of Rosemary Hall, founder member of the Woman's National Democratic Club and the first Democratic committeewoman from Connecticut, is a pioneer in women's education. She battled for equal educational rights for women long before anyone dreamed of granting them.

Mrs. A. S. Mike Moroney

"Schoolgirls today must be taught the elements of industry," she said. "They must be disciplined to long hours and hard work. That means that culture must serve as the handmaiden of industry for the time being."

In order to take her place in the working world today, the schoolgirl must be self-reliant. She should be left alone as much as possible but guarded in certain respects that boys are not, according to the speaker.

To accomplish this end, Miss Ruutz-Rees advocates self-government in the schools. This method, if handled properly, she thinks, would develop a sense of justice, sense of the rights of others and a sense of responsibility.

"Already the young people of today are thinking about how to live in a world with other people," she said. "In my day we thought only of developing into fine individual characters."

Mrs. Laurence Rockefeller

Some of the ways in which schoolgirls can be useful in war work at the moment, according to Miss Ruutz-Rees, are: Rolling Red Cross bandages, preparing for air raids, spotting enemy planes, caring for children and working in gardens and fields.

While she thinks girls should be taught typing and shorthand, cooking, sewing, darning and other courses applicable to war industry, she said, "Now it seems more practical to put the young girls in a state of mind rather than to train them for any specific pursuit."

Mathematical computation, sciences and geography with special emphasis on reading maps and charts should be stressed in the young girls' training, according to Miss Ruutz-Rees. "Also, the young girl should be taught American history," she said. "But only by an enthusiastic teacher who loves and understands and can impart that to his or her pupils."

The speaker stressed the point that girls ought to be trained to write clear and accurate statements, to talk intelligently over telephones. Furthermore, she advocated the same plan of training that the Assistant Secretary of State advised for young men. These are, in part, to have good health, to be vigorous and physically hard, to make clear and accurate statements, to be able to care for self under all conditions, to become proficient in mathematics, chemistry, American history, in reading maps and charts.

Several alumnae of Rosemary Hall were out to hear Miss Ruutz-Rees' talk. Among them were Mrs. Robert Taft, Mrs. Laurence Rockefeller, Mrs. Ethan Hitchock, Baroness J. C. Van Eck of Greenwich, Conn., Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the club, who presided and introduced the speaker. Also Miss Margaret Mallory, Mrs. William Sturtevant. Other honored guests included Mrs. A. S. M. Monroney, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Claude Hamilton, Mrs. Allen Mullinix, Mrs. Emmitt Reed and Mrs. Edward Sturdevant.

Big League Press Party Given by Combined Clubs

A big league "party for the Press" took over the spotlight last evening, when the members of the National Press Club and the Women's National Press Club got together for an evening of merriment and frivolity, at the National Press Club.

Because of the war, elaborate trappings were definitely missing; no flowers, no skits, no long galaxy of officials; no speeches. The accent was on musical artistry and hilarity with the Brazilian Opera singer, Bidu Sayao and the Russian violinist Nathan Milstein furnishing the musical part of the program, and Elsa Maxwell the hilarity.

There was no receiving line, no formal introductions, and no seating arrangement. As the guests arrived they found two huge glass bowls which looked like the ones used in the drawing of "draft" numbers.

Each couple drew from the bowls a number, high or low, for seats. Editors sat with reporters. Cronies were separated. The few special guests were sprinkled all around the dining room.

Highlight of the evening was the "Battle of the Sexes," which turned out to be a political discussion of ridiculous subjects, participated in by guests picked at random. Winners of the contest were presented with joweled prizes. Judges were the Secretary of Commerce, Jesse Jones, Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Sir Wilmott Lewis of the London Times, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson.

Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, president of the Women's National Press Club, and Clifton Prevost, president of the National Press Club, headed the committee in charge. Others who assisted included Patricia O'Malley, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Women's National Press Club; Howard Acton, who fills the same position in the National Press Club, Betty Hynes and Elizabeth Ford.

Individuals Surrender Rights For Duration, Capper Asserts

INDIVIDUALITY must take a back seat for the duration. This means that theindividual must give up his own hopes and aspirations for himself, for his family, for his business, profession, occupation or indutry, according to Senator Arthur Capper, guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the D. C. League of Republican Women yesterday

"To a considerable extent the individual must give up his right to think, to utter or to believe," he said. "To what extent these particular rights will vanish will depend upon circumstances and upon the maintenance of a virile and active opposition party in Congress and in the Nation."

Property Rights Relinquished

The speaker went on to point out that the individual must give up the use of his own property and in many instances even the ownership of his property for the common welfare and defense.

"'All-out war' means Government control—not just regulation of business, industry, finance, transportation, communications and agriculture," declared Senator Capper. "It means a greater extent than many realize today, Government control of labor, before the final victory is won."

In addition to over one-half of all production and national income going for war purposes, Senator Capper predicts that within two years at least one-half of the civilian population employed in the United States will be dependent for its daily bread upon employment by the Government or defense industries financed with Government funds.

Also, the speaker told of breaking down of tariff barriers in the Western Hemisphere. Stressing the fact that this is a war measure, he indicated that this wartime step might make world peace possible following this war.

Party Lines Fade

So far as the war is concerned and the conduct of the war is concerned, there no longer are Republicans and Democrats in Congress—just Americans. The same is true of the Nation as a whole, according to Senator Capper's observations.

Other speakers on the program included Mrs. Edward Shattuck, wife of Major Shattuck, U. S. A., and Mrs. Newton Cordis Wing, chairman of the women's division of the salvage for victory.

Mrs. Shattuck told how the young boys of Montgomery County are being trained to pinch hit for milk truck drivers. Over in Fairfax County the young people are canning tomatoes.

Mrs. Wing pointed out that 80 per cent of paper being used today is from salvaged paper; and that 50 per cent of materials salvaged were being put into battleships now.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, presided and introduced the speakers. Following the program and business meeting a tea and reception was held. Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher was chairman of the hospitality committee. Assisting her were Mrs. Thomas D. Winters and Mrs. Ulysses S. Guyer—wives of Kansas Representatives; also, Mrs. A. C. Simon and Mrs. James Ivin Steele.

Civil Service Theft Trial Starts Today

Trial of five persons on charges of stealing confidential Civil Service Commission records will get under way at 10 a. m. in District Court today before a jury of four men and eight women impaneled yesterday after three hours of examination.

Twenty-nine veniremen were excused either by challenge or for prejudicial reasons before the prosecution and defense declared themselves satisfied with the panel.

During the impaneling of the jury, a statement by the defense to which the Government agreed was made in court emphasizing that the case had no "subversive" elements.

20,000 Records Involved

On trial, with Justice James W. Morris presiding, are Walter A. C. Camp and Werner J. Orbach, president and vice president of the Vita-Health Food Co.; Lawrence L. Haynes, office manager of the Standard Business Service, a direct mail list supply firm; Harlan G. Crandall, former Civil Service Commission employe, and Miss Katherine Kay, former secretary to Defendants Camp and Orbach.

The Government charges that about 20,000 commission personnel records were stolen and removed to the Standard Business Service office, where the five defendants allegedly worked together in converting the records for their own use.

The case got off to a ragged start yesterday, after four previous postponements, when one of the defendants, Crandall, failed to appear in court. Judge Morris immediately ordered a bench warrant for Crandall's arrest, but subsequently it was learned that he was on his way to court from Richmond.

Court Awaits Arrival

Judge Morris recessed court until Crandall's arrival and after the impaneling of the jury, ordered Crandall to be committed to jail while the judge considered allowing release in bail. Obviously angry, Judge Morris called Crandall's absence "inexcusable."

The jury: Mrs. Elizabeth M. Andrews, Mrs. Mildred H. Atherton, Mrs. Loretta S. Landon, Richard R. Mertens, Edward W. Parker, Joseph A. Bader, William L. Blair, Miss Elizabeth T. Banks, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Bashwitz, Mrs. Oletha B. Blayton. Mrs. Corinne W. Cox and Mrs. Florence Y. Douglas. Mrs. Suzanne H. Finn was selected as alternate.

The prosecution is being directed by Charles B. Murray, assistant United States district attorney. Defense attorneys are William H. Collins, for Camp and Orbach; James A. O'Shea, for Crandall; Sol M. Alpher, for Miss Kay and Harold A. Garvey, for Haynes.

3 Auxiliary Police Solve Clothing Store Burglary

Three auxiliary police officers yesterday solved a clothing store burglary, nabbing the suspect red-handed—or maybe it was red-legged.

The officers—Capt. Frank M. Dyer and Sergts. Saul Sorkin and Nicholas Genua—were cruising in Dyer's car when their suspicion was aroused by a 20-year-old Negro who was walking in the 800 block of Seventh Street with a large package under his arm.

The officers halted the man and on closer inspection saw his left leg was bleeding. On opening the package, the officers discovered 10 dresses, which it developed had been stolen from Hern's clothing store, 806 Seventh Street Northwest. The suspect apparently was cut when he kicked in a window to get into the store.

Transferred to St. Louis, he served as zone supply officer for the Southwest Area until 1917, when he sailed with General Pershing and the first contingent of American troops for St. Nazaire, France.

Retired in 1922

For organizing St. Nazaire and other French ports for debarkation of American troops he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and made an officer in the French Legion of Honor.

After the war Colonel Stanley returned to St. Louis as zone supply officer until placed on the Army's retired list in 1922. Following a year in business at St. Louis, he came to the Soldiers Home here as quartermaster.

Colonel Stanley was a familiar figure at Washington horse shows, where he frequently served as judge and entered horses in competitions.

He is survived by three sons, David S. Stanley, jr., and Lieut. Joseph W. Stanley of Washington and Samuel F. Stanley of New York City; two sisters, Miss Blanch H. Stanley and Mrs. D. G. Rumbough of Washington and two granddaughters.

Good Cooking Makes Dieting Stiff Problem

Wise Selection However, Will Cut Calories

By Ida Jean Kain

THE GOOD cooks are the ones who have a hard time dieting. Their theme song is: "Do give us any tips you can to make it easier!" So if you qualify for help, here goes:

Let's start with dinner, for it is apt to be your undoing. Begin your meal with a hearty salad—there is nothing like it to cut your appetite down to size. To get the most for the fewest calories use either a very small amount of oil well diluted with vinegar or pickle juice or go the whole way and use mineral oil dressing or just a dash of lemon.

All Courses Included

For the second course have a clear bouillon, piping hot, and whole wheat melba toast without butter. Next have a generous portion of lean meat. But have the meat without any gravy or fat, just a sprig of parsley. Have two vegetables that have been cooked quickly and in the least possible quantity of water. That preserves the flavor so you don't especially want butter or cream sauce with them. Along with these you are entitled to a fluffy baked potato with butter. But make it only one pat, one-fourth inch thick. For the next course you can have cheese and a couple of crackers. You don't miss a course in that meal and it counts just 600 calories.

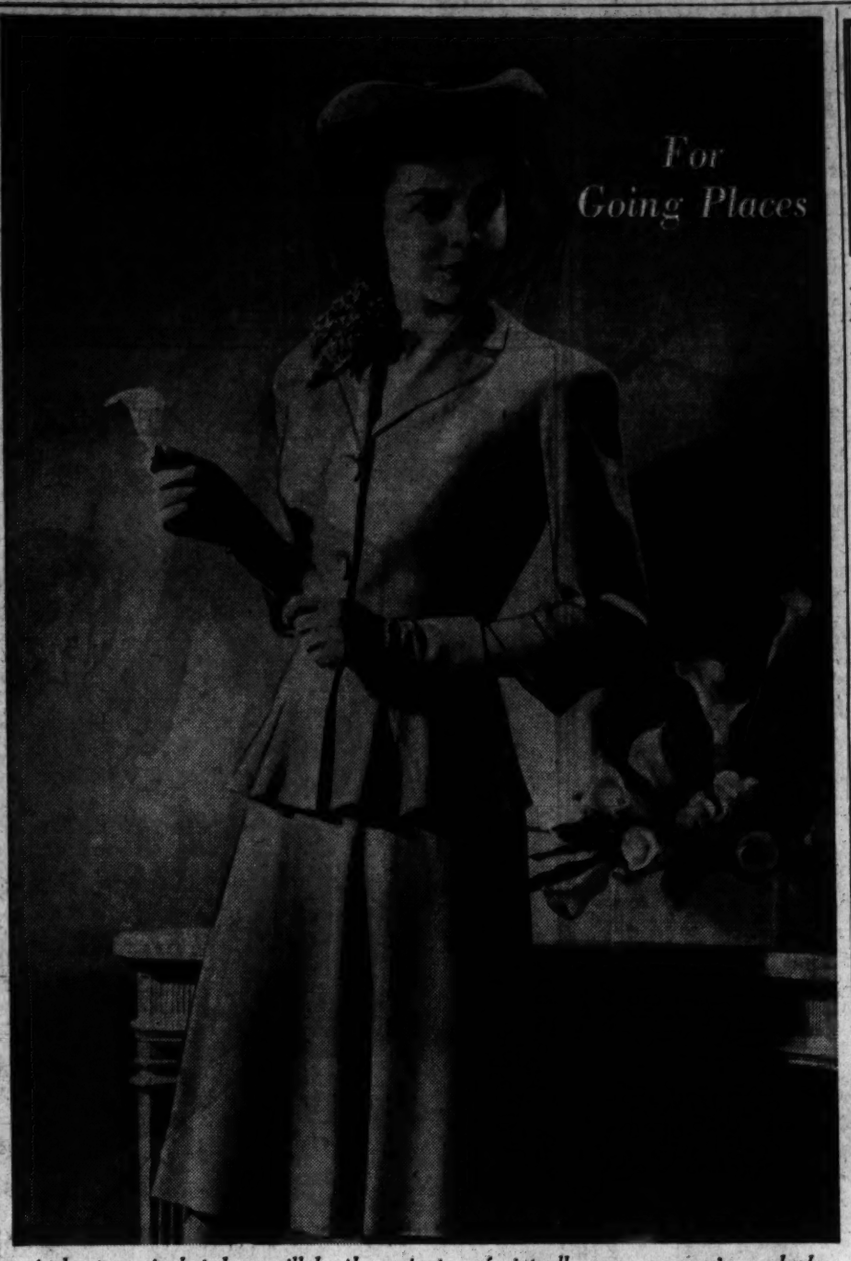
Since you are holding your calories down to 1200 a day to reduce, you have 600 left for the other two meals. For breakfast have half a grapefruit—which furnishes almost your entire daily requirement of vitamin C—and if you take sugar with it, make it a single teaspoonful for 30 calories. You can have two thin slices of whole wheat or enriched toast with one-half pat of butter. But take your coffee clear. You will get used to it and like it.

For lunch, whip up one egg, plus a second egg white. This second white costs you only 18 calories and how it swells the size of the serving! With this, have a slice of bread or toast, one-half pat of butter, sliced tomato and a glass of skim milk. Oh, you don't like skimmilk? Then make it into cocoa. Use one cup of like skim milk? Then make it cocoa, and vanilla for flavoring.

Milk a Must

Somewhere in the day's menu you must get in two glasses of skim milk, or one glass of milk and a serving of cheese. The milk can in the form of soup, custard or a beverage. Just so you get it! If you have your green salad at noon instead of at night you can have cheese with it and it will stay by you longer. American cheese, grated and sprinkled over the top, makes salad delicious. Or, you can simply have a cube of cheese. We should all use more cheese in our menus.

You can see that you do not have to give up any good cooking to diet. You just have to watch—and count—the side calories in butter, mayonnaise and the like. If you will do that, there's only one other rule you have to follow. Never eat until you are ready to say "I can't eat another mouthful." That is what makes your appetite grow.



At least one jacket dress will be the mainstay of virtually every woman's wardrobe this summer. The reed-slim frock above of rich Eastman rayon crepe is wearable for stepping out by day or night. It is right in any pastel color for informal weddings. In white it looks like a graduation dress. Stitching trims the V-neckline of the dress underneath. Smoky pearl buttons and a peplum flare give distinction to the jacket.

First Sag in Upholstering Is Signal for Repair

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IT'S NO longer a point of pride but of patriotism to "keep up" your place, to repair and renovate and recondition so that there won't be unnecessary waste from neglect. Salvage your furnishings . . . put them in shape to last out the crisis.

Take upholstered furniture for instance—the time to "do something" is when the first spring begins to sag. Then the repair job is fairly simple. If you wait till the whole bottom has fallen out, you have a hard job to put it right—besides certain of its interiors may have to be entirely replaced and the frame will be weakened.

The importance of keeping up your upholstered furniture isn't just a matter of economy and thrift . . . actually many materials used in upholstered furniture just won't be available for the duration. Jute for webbing and burlap, springs, tacks, certain types of stuffing, various favorite fabrics for coverings are all turning up missing or scarce. When you think in terms of not being able to order replacements so blithely, the necessity to guard what you have and make it last is obvious.

The outer covering of upholstered furniture can be put on by amateurs who are willing to take pains and patience and learn a few basic rules of the game. The inside story is something else again—it's hard work and requires strong hands to do this job by home talent. In normal times, we usually advise that this inside job be done by professional experts, even though you do the actual covering yourself.

But now with the shortage of skilled labor, home makers—or their husbands—are going to have to do more of this sort of work.

Good Washing To Take Place Of Chlorine

Chlorine has gone to war, and in order to meet war needs, it has been necessary to cut the supply to civilians. Explosives and snowy bedsheets, airplane windshields and flowery summer dress prints—these are just a few of the things for which chlorine is used.

The main effect of curtailing civilian supplies will be on our clothes. Textile manufacturers will have less chlorine with which to bleach their cottons and linens, homemakers will have less to use as a bleach in their laundry and for other household uses, commerical laundries will have less for bleaching and sterlizing clothes.

Until recently, the consumer Division of the OPA tells us, households got along entirely without chlorine, and a return to that practice should prove no hardship. Bleaching has never been a good substitute for washing. Soil must be removed by soap, water and good washing methods. Using too much chlorine in an effort to get clothes snowy white has done much damage to fabrics, and when homemakers again learn to depend on good washing and sunshine as a whitener, our clothes will no doubt last much longer.

But while households and laundries can get along with limited amounts of chlorine, textile manufacturers, who will have only one-half of their usual amounts, have a more difficult problem to solve. Chlorine is needed in the manufacture of white and light-colored cottons and linens. When a scarcity of bleach limits the amount of white and light-colored goods that can be made, and when, at the same time, a scarcity of dyes limits the amount of color that can be put into materials, we may find ourselves wearing more unbleached colors.

Paper Lace Trims Cottons

You can be his valentine in a paper lace frame. Now that spring is really here, we note that paper lace is with us again. Not really paper, of course, but a crisp, starchy cotton, snow white, the patterns as intricate as paper cut-outs. Lupe Velez, who masquerades as a very frou-frou French maid, for her role in RKO Radio's "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost," does herself up in a black frock with musical comedy collar and cuffs (these last clear to the elbows) of crisp cotton lace. Idea for your best black frock.

And by the way—why not paper lace to trim a dark dinner gown?

Mary Haworth's Mail

Ambitious, Industrious, Well-Schooled Lawyer, Now on Military Duty, Is Handicapped Socially And Professionally by Disputatious Temperament

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a disposition problem, and would appreciate your help in solving it. I am a bachelor lawyer, 28 years old, now on military duty. I am well educated and have always been very ambitious and industrious. However, my disposition not infrequently makes enemies for me.

On the whole, my personality is probably very agreeable; but in one particular I am perhaps a younger edition of "The Terrible Tempered Mr. Bang." This unfortunate trait of which I speak is a lack of tact, displayed on many occasions when I am absolutely sure that I am right; and, therefore, sure that the other fellow cannot possibly be right. I have a very conscientious and somewhat judicious temperament, so that once my mind is made up, I give strong expression to definite opinions.

Also, I am often very critical of others. This tendency has caused difficulty in social as well as business relationships. When I view these misunderstandings objectively,—apart from the specific issue involved,—I can see where I was at fault; but for the life of me, I don't know what to do about it. Incidentally, my father has the same trouble. Can you help me? Sincerely, JOHN DOE.

Courtly Ben Franklin Conquered Same Fault

DEAR J. D.: It is a matter of history that Benjamin Franklin was as renowned and beloved for his courtly manners, as he was revered for his achievements as statesman, philosopher, scientist and humanitarian. But it is perhaps not generally known that in process of becoming America's most civilized man,—a title conferred upon him by posterity, and never yet challenged,—Benjamin Franklin was called upon to wrestle (victoriously) with the same fault of didactic arrogance which hampers you today.

As he notes in his autobiography: "A Quaker friend of mine having kindly informed me that I was generally thought proud; that my pride showed itself frequently in conversation; that I was not content with being in the right when discussing any point but was overbearing and rather insolent, of which he convinced me by mentioning several instances: I determined endeavoring to cure myself, if I could, of this vice or folly among the rest . . .

"I cannot boast," his narrative continues, "of much success in acquiring the reality of this virtue; but I had a good deal (of success) with regard to the appearance of it. I made it a rule to forbear all direct contradiction of the sentiments of others, and all positive assertion of my own . . . I soon found the advantage of this change in my manner; the conversations I engaged in went on more pleasantly. The modest way in which I proposed my opinions procured them a readier reception and less contradiction; I had less mortification when I was found to be in the wrong; and I more easily prevailed with others to give up their mistakes and join with me when I happened to be in the right."

Always conscientiously striving for perfection of character,—even while contributing stupendously to the advancement of science, literacy and social welfare in the world of his day,—Franklin early made a list of desirable "virtues" he purposed to acquire. It was his plan,—as recorded in his writings,—to take up the exercise of each virtue in turn, in the order listed, and practice that virtue until it had become second nature to him; after which he would give his full attention to the next.

He started with a 12-point program, outlined as follows: "1. Temperance: Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation. 2. Silence: Speak not but what may benefit others or yourself; avoid trifling conversation. 3. Order: Let all your things have their place; let each part of your business have its time. 4. Resolution: Resolve to perform what you ought; perform without fail what you resolve. 5. Frugality: Make no expense but to do good to others or for yourself; i. e., waste nothing. 6. Industry: Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; cut off all unnecessary actions.

"7. Sincerity: Use no hurtful deceit; think innocently and justly; and if you speak, speak accordingly. 8. Justice: Wrong none by doing injuries, or omitting the benefits that are your duty. 9. Moderation: Avoid extremes; forebearing resenting injuries so much as you think they deserve. 10. Cleanliness: Tolerate no uncleanliness in body, clothes or habitation. 11. Tranquillity: Be not disturbed at trifles, or at accidents common or unavoidable. 12. Chastity: Rarely use venery but for health or offspring; never to dullness, weakness or the injury of your own or another's peace or reputation."

It was not until his "Quaker friend" had chided him on his intellectual snobbery that Franklin added to the list: "13. Humility. Imitate Jesus and Socrates." Thus falteringly he took his place among the immortals. For humility (as proverb tells us) is the beginning of wisdom. And what is humility? Humility is the state or quality of being humble in spirit. It is freedom from pride and arrogance. And, I regretfully submit, it is an attribute of noble personality seldom encountered in the governing circles of society today.

If, with Franklin, you must ruefully confess that true humility of spirit is alien to your nature, then at least, like him, you can patiently cultivate its outward seeming,—and so acquire a manner of courtly persuasiveness. In honestly facing and sincerely deploring your tendency to be disagreeably assertive and fault-finding, you are well on the road to reform. You have Franklin's example (and the recorded fruits thereof) to guide you the rest of the way. In particular (1) his rule to forbear all direct contradiction of the sentiments of others, and all positive assertions of your own; and (2) his practice of the virtue of silence; speaking only what may benefit others or yourself; avoiding trifling conversation. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Coffee-Prune Pastry an Irresistible Treat

LUCKY, we Americans, to drink our coffee for a nickel a cup and for less if we make it ourselves. As yet, coffee has not come under the rationing program, but that does not mean that we should not use each particle of coffee to its utmost. With shipping facilities being taxed, all foods should be used, with no possible chance for waste.

Make only the coffee that will be drunk, for reheated coffee tastes vile. The reason why reheated coffee is not good is because waxy, resinous insoluable fats comprise about a fifth of ground coffee. Cooking and reheating melts these fats and blends them into the brew.

Coffee is just as flavorsome when used as a cooking ingredient as for a beverage. We put it into puddings, jellies, pies, breads and cakes. But it isn't stale leftover coffee that is used, but fresh brewed.

One of the irresistible treats that can be made with strong coffee infusion is Coffee Prune Pastry. The following prune pie recipe, with a coffee flavor, is one you will want to try.

Coffee-Prune Pastry

Make 1 cup strong coffee infusion. Soak 1 tablespoon gelatin in half of coffee infusion. Scald remaining coffee. Beat 4 egg yolks slightly; add the hot coffee, ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt and heat over hot water until cooked. Dissolve the gelatin in coffee custard and cool. Beat 4 egg whites stiff and beat in ¼ cup sugar. Fold into custard just before it becomes entirely firm. Fold in 1 cup cooked, sliced prunes. Pour into baked pastry shell and chill. Top with whipped cream.

War Gives Women Opportunities In Engineering

Because of the war, opportunities for women in engineering are opening up as never before, according to Miss Elsie Eaves, the first of her sex to become a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Writing in the current issue of Independent Woman, published by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., Miss Eaves tells of the many signs that point to the changing times. Trained women are being urged to become active in a profession that will have an estimated shortage of 18,000 engineers this year in the United States.

"Then engineering colleges have rallied to the needs," she says. "They have compressed four-year courses into three years by eliminating vacations and working straight through on forced draft. In addition they have added special short courses for quick training both for specific professional jobs and for sub-professional work."

Bath Towels Make Splendid Curtains, Designers Find

If you're planning to redecorate the bathroom this spring, and tired of fighting the old battle of limp curtains every time you draw a nice steamy bath, you'll find curtains made of bath towels solve the problem efficiently and beautifully.

In fact, so many attractive possibilities can be worked out with bath towel curtains that smart interior decorators are having themselves a time with the idea. And while color is very important to smart effects, the American Institute of Laundering reports that good bath towels are color fast under normal laundering methods.

Really charming effects can be worked out without having to equip the bathroom with all new towels, wash cloths and rugs. That's an item these days when we need to conserve instead of squander last year's fabrics of all kinds.

Let's suppose you've just matched the blue bath mat and rug set you got Christmas with new towels and wash cloths—maybe white with a blue border. You can either match the towels in the size needed for the windows and use a plain blue cotton cord for tie-backs, or all-white towels with the blue tie-backs would be equally attractive. The basic idea is just that simple and easy to work out. From this basic idea, you can go as elaborate as you want—towels with ower borders and matching or properly contrasted cotton tie-back cords are very smart.

Noted Portrait Painter and Wife Here for Visit; Being Widely Entertained; Crowded Schedule for Maria Martins Next Week

IN TOWN FOR one of their frequent, but all-too-brief visits are Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Chandor, who arrived a couple of days ago from New York and plan to be off again tonight.

Britisher by birth, Texan by adoption, and portrait painter by profession, Mr. Chandor has just finished a number of commissions that kept him and his attractive wife in New York the entire winter. Now they are en route to their home in Weatherford, Tex., and are stopping off here just long enough to get a deep breath and see a few friends before they resume their journey.

"We think we've hit on a plan to save tires—at least a 200-mile run on them," Mrs. Chandor told me yesterday. And this is it: From here they'll go by boat to Norfolk, shipping their automobile along with them. That's where the tire-saving comes in. From Norfolk, they'll drive leisurely on to Charleston to spend a few days, and then head straight across country to the Lone Star State.

Several commissions already are awaiting Mr. Chandor there, and still more are on tap in New York for next autumn. His work is scheduled about a year ahead, and I understand you're lucky to obtain the attention of his talented brush, even by far-advanced order.

Arranging to see all their Washington friends on such a short visit is something the Chandors just can't manage. Not this trip, anyway. But yesterday, they did see several, and still more engagements with friends are on their calendar for today. First thing they did on arriving here was to get in touch with their close friend, House Speaker Sam Rayburn, who entertained at a small luncheon for Mr. Chandor yesterday, and had both the artist and his wife dining with him last night.

Douglas Chandor

The Douglas Chandor Portrait of Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt

YOU'LL REMEMBER, of course, that a few months ago Mr. Chandor put the finishing touches on not only one, but three portraits of Speaker Rayburn. One now hangs in the Texas State Capitol at Austin, where the Chandor portrait of President Roosevelt also has a featured place in the picture gallery. Another Chandor portrayal of Speaker Rayburn hangs in splendor at East Texas State Teachers College, which was Mayo College back in the days when young Sam studied there. The third portrait, the "official one," is still in Washington and eventually will hang in the Capitol.

On the Chandor calendar for today is the luncheon that he and his wife will have with James H. R. Cromwell. Their friendship with him, and vice versa, dates to the time when Mr. Chandor at the commission of Lord Duveen first came over from his native England to do a portrait of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, Mr. Cromwell's mother.

Friends of Mr. Chandor all over the world, incidentally, are awaiting publication of a book about the artist. To be entitled "Chandor's Portraits;" the tome is being turned out by Malcolm Vaughan, noted art critic. There is to be a foreword by Deems Taylor, and the volume will include 15 color reproductions with the Chandor portrait of the President's mother used as the frontispiece. The book is scheduled for autumn publication. It should be out about the time the Chandors come back through Washington in September on their way back to New York, where they usually spend the winter.

SPEAKING OF ART reminds me—that amazing Maria Martins, one of the few diplomatic hostesses here who negotiates a full-fledged career along with a crowded social calendar, is to be honored at a continuous series of fetes during her stay in New York next week. She plans to be off to Gotham on Thursday to make last-minute arrangements for her one-woman sculpture exhibition which will open at the Valentine Galleries on Monday.

How she accomplishes all she does, I can't imagine. Seems to me that the lovely and lively wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, who is seen at virtually every important party in town—and gives plenty of her own—is one of the most remarkable women in Washington. Always gracious and smiling; never, apparently, harassed or hurried, she goes gayly along her way . . . making friends wherever she happens to be, without devoting her entire time to butterflying about. Her magnificent sculpture attest the fact that she spends hours on end toiling over the work she vows is "Nothing but fun," and the results have had the art world agog for months.

Mme. Martins' New York show will feature 21 pieces, including several which were on display at her big-league exhibition at the Corcoran Art Gallery last October. And there will also be three new pieces—a magnificent bas-relief, 14 figures, called "Evening in Salzedo," and a dancer and a black Madonna carved from Brazilian wood.

Several parties will accent Mme. Martins' sojourn in New York. On the afternoon her exhibition opens she will be feted at a 6-to-8 party given by Mrs. Byron Foy. That evening Mrs. Nancy Van Vleck will entertain at a dinner in honor of Mme. Martins. And that's only a beginning

Miss Jean Virginia Moser Is Bride of Lieut. Crump

White flowers and palms formed the background at All Saints Episcopal Church last evening for the wedding of Miss Jean Virginia Moser, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James M. Moser of Washington, and Lieut. Ralph W. Crump, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. H. Crump of Chevy Chase.

The vows were read at 8 o'clock by the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, and Dr. Moser gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown of ivory bridal satin was trimmed in Alencon lace. It was cut with a sweetheart neckline and full skirt which fell into a very long, full, circular train. A veil of ivory illusion fell from her halo of net and lace, and she carried a sheaf of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Donna Moser, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. Her dress was of seafoam green net and lace over taffeta, made with a torso-length bodice and three-quarter length sleeves. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

As bridesmaid, Miss Ann Moser, also a sister of the bride, wore Chinese yellow fashioned on identical lines of the maid of honor's gown. Best man was Benjamin White, and ushers were Lawrence Crump, James M. Moser, jr., John Greig and Bennett Willis.

A small reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. After the ceremony the couple left on a wedding trip. They will make their home at Fort Smith, Ark. For traveling, the bride chose a Chinese red print crepe ensemble with white accessories. Her corsage was of lilies of the valley.

'Royal Dolls' To Be Presented This Afternoon

Princess Elizabeth, having become a grown-up young lady, is giving away her dolls, which is somewhat more of an occasion than when most little girls put aside their childhood playmates.

The British War Relief Society has been the recipient of a number of the dolls, which will be formally presented to that organization tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock at the British Embassy. Lady Halifax will preside at the ceremony—not a very elaborate one—when the dolls will be turned over to their new owners.

Here to receive the dolls will be War Relief President Robert R. Appleby of New York, and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, president of the organization in Washington, will also be on hand.

Lieut. Henry And Bride on Wedding Trip

Ending their brief honeymoon tomorrow, Lieut. (j. g.) Samuel J. Henry, U. S. N. R., and his bride, the former Miss Anne Gluyas Turner, will make their home temporarily at Norfolk, Va. Lieut. Henry is stationed at the Naval Air Station there.

The couple were married Saturday in a quiet ceremony at 4 o'clock at St. Andrew's Chapel at the Naval Academy in Annapolis. The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Caldwell Turner of Washington and the late Col. Turner, U. S. M. C., was given in marriage by her brother, Thomas Livingston Turner of Miami.

Her gown of mousseline featured a shirred bodice and a three-tiered skirt with a train. She wore the lace veil which had belonged to her grandmother and carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Chaplain William D. Thomas officiated for the ceremony. Neither the bride nor Lieutenant Henry, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Henry, of Washington, were attended.

Series of Fetes For Visitors

Small, intimate teas for no more than five or six friends are taking the place of the large formal tea that Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr and the former United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia usually give for their annual house guests, Prince and Princess Sapieha and the latter's mother Baroness Bournemiza.

Due to a recent illness from which she is recuperating the baroness has been unable to attend any of the Capital's more formal social events since their arrival here last Thursday and their calendar has been restricted to small luncheons, teas and such.

William Jennings Price entertained them at luncheon Saturday at La Salle du Bois and Mr. and and Mrs. Carr had a few guests in for tea that afternoon and again yesterday.

The vistors will remain in town until about the middle of the week when they will go to Westport, N. Y., on Lake Champlain where they have leased a house for the summer.

William A. Snyder And Bride Return From Wedding Trip

Returned recently from a wedding trip are Mr. and Mrs. William Arthur Snyder, who are making their home in Chevy Chase, D. C. Their marriage took place April 25 in the First Baptist Church, Bethesda, with the Rev. Dr. J. Raymond Nelson reading the vows.

She is the former Miss Elizabeth Caroline Linhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl G. Linhart of Bethesda, and is a great-granddaughter of Oliver Wendell Holmes. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Snyder of Philadelphia, and is at present connected with the National Institute of Health and Medical Research.

The bride attended George Washington University and Strayer's Business College. Mr. Snyder is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. A small reception in the church parsonage followed the ceremony.

Edith Blake, Ensign Disney Are Wed

For the Navy wedding of Miss Edith Louise Blake and Ensign Mitchell Keith Disney, U. S. N. R., yesterday, a fittingly patriotic motif was carried out in a simple ceremony at the Cleveland Park Congregational Church.

White flowers in two large baskets predominated, and beneath them was a row of blue iris mingled with bridal wreath. The tricolor scheme was completed with small red roses on the altar before which the Rev. Paul Yinger read the vows at 9:45 in the morning. George A. Gingrass gave his niece in marriage.

As a bride she wore navy blue trimmed in white and her corsage was orchids. The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Disney of Washington took his oath as an ensign only in March. He wore his white dress uniform for the ceremony. Attending the couple were Miss Juliette Coulombe of Bowie, Md., and John E. Kane of Washington.

After a reception for about 60 guests at the Wardman Park Hotel, Ensign Disney and his bride left on a week's honeymoon in New Hampshire. Mrs. Disney is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Blake of Derry, N. H., and during their visit with her parents a second reception is planned.

The couple will return to Washington about next Saturday and will make their home at 3525 Davenport Street. Mrs. Disney is a graduate of Pinkerton Academy in Derry. Ensign Disney was graduated from Washington and Lee University in 1941 and had completed a semester at Harvard Law School before going into the Navy. His father is a member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals.

Mr. and Mrs. Lacy Give Luncheon at Virginia Home

A house party at their home near Leesburg, Va., filled the week-end with social activity for Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Byrd Lacy. Climaxing the festivities was a luncheon Sunday at which Miss Virginia Pope of New York was the honored guest.

Miss Pope, who is fashion editor of the New York Times, was among the guests who came down Saturday to be the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lacy.

Other guests at the luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, Atherton Richards, now of the Office of the Coordinator of Information, and Mrs. Richards, Merrill Meigs, who heads the aircraft production division of the War Production Board, and Mrs. Meigs, Mr. and Mrs. Heath Amory, Maj. Claude M. Berkeley of the British Joint Staff Commission, Dr. Eugene de Savitsch, Capt. Alfred L. Leondopoulos, Naval Attache at the Greek Legation, Miss Katharyne Linn and Mrs. Arthur Grainger.

Peggy Simpson Completes Plans For May 16 Rites

Bridesmaids will soon be arriving from diverse directions to attend Miss Peggy Simpson, May 16, when she will become the bride of Ensign William A. Engdahl at Fort Myer Chapel.

Miss Simpson, whose engagement was announced just last month by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Lee Simpson of Arlington, has chosen her sister, Miss Kay Simpson, for her maid of honor. Miss Simpson is at present at school in Hampton, Va.

Bridesmaids will be Ensign Engdahl's sister, Miss Frances Engdahl, who will come from her home in Sisseton, S. Dak., for the wedding; Miss Cecilia Gaines of Birmingham, Ala., and Miss Daena Affutt of Washington. Miss Gaines was the bride-elect's roommate when she was a student at Fairfax Hall School.

Michael Arlen And Wife Are Widely Feted

As all parents of amateur thespians know, the world's end would be no tragedy to compare with their not being in the audience on the big night of the "school play." Not in the younger's mind, anyway.

And that is the all-important reason Mr. and Mrs. Michael Arlen must end their visit here with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dewey and return to New York tomorrow. Daughter Venitia, who is about half-way through grade school, is going to be in a play. She attends Miss Hewitt's School in New York.

Venitia, incidentally, takes her name romantically enough from Venice, Italy, where the Arlens met at the Schneider Cup races, when Mrs. Arlen was Countess Atlanta Mercati, beautiful daughter of Count Mercati, former chamberlain to the King of Greece.

Meanwhile, entertaining for the author and his wife goes on apace. The Minister of Mrs. Arlen's homeland, Greece, and Mme. Diamantopoulous were the ranking guests last night, when Mr. and Mrs. Dewey entertained at a small and quite informal buffet supper for their visitors. Earlier in the day Mr. Arlen and Mr. Dewey were taken on a tour of the Supreme Court with Justice Stanley Reed, no less, for their personal guide.

Tonight's fete will be a dinner specially in the Arlens' honor at the home of Mrs. William Levenson Gower in Chevy Chase. Mrs. Gower, the Arlens and Mr. and Mrs. Dewey have been friends dating from the years they all were in Paris. In the party will be Mrs. Gower's daughter, Cynthia, who has only recently returned from Europe where she was with Eve Curie, also a good friend of the Deweys.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Commerce Department has limited its employes to two weeks vacation this year. The only exception is Weather Bureau scientific employes who'll get only a few days when they can be spared. The bureau is understaffed . . . Federal Security doesn't plan to limit holidays but no extensive leaves will be okayed . . . Veterans Administration won't approve more than two weeks except in extenuating cases . . . The unofficial Government policy will be to give each employe at least a week off when he can be conveniently released.

Decentralization of the War Production Board is up again. It's one of those things that's on one day and off the next. Opinion is divided among board officials on the matter. However, it's a fact that the pressure to move WPB branches comes from officials within the board itself and not from the President and the Budget Bureau as has been the case in every other decentralization. Several division chiefs frankly believe they could do a better job if they were moved to a city where they had space enough to move around in.

WPB has given consideration to the moving of its iron and steel division to Pittsburgh or some other industrial center, the textile division to New York City, the farm machinery unit to Chicago, the compliance division to New York, and the rubber unit to Akron. However, all these proposals are understood to have been rejected for the time being except for the transfer of the compliance division to New York City. Compliance will be expanded after it's moved. Only about 200 people would be transferred from Washington. WPB also is working out a plan for 13 regional offices. A few policy-making officials would be moved to each office from Washington.

All the agencies ordered from Washington recently by Budget Bureau planned large expansions. There just isn't room enough here for them to grow. General Accounting Office contemplates a huge increase of employes. Construction of its new building has been delayed by priorities trouble, plans have been revised, and when it will be ready for occupancy, if ever, is still in doubt. GAO is responsible to Congress alone and the executive branch has little desire to tamper with it after the row over the reorganization bill a few years back. Nevertheless, it would come as no surprise if GAO, at the suggestion of the Budget Bureau, would set up an office in a nearby city where the several thousand new employes would be put to work. It certainly would be in line with present policy.

Patent Office was moved to Richmond a couple of months ago but the employes have yet to receive the per diem promised them . . . Paul McNutt is reported to be insisting on the appointment of Gen. Frank J. McSherry as operations chief of the manpower commission despite the opposition of labor leaders. Fowler Harper is lined up as vice chairman and Social Security Chairman Arthur Altmeyer as executive director of the commission . . . The United China Relief drive is going over big in Federal agencies. Tariff Commission is aiming for 100 per cent participation. Its 333 employes already have contributed $476 and all collections haven't been made. Veterans employes contributed $1100, Library of Congress, $403, and Board of Tax Appeals, $109.

Soil Conservation Service is reorganizing and decentralizing. It already is greatly decentralized—about 600 of its 12,000 employes are in Washington—but more will be moved out to the field under the reorganization. It was estimated last night that more than 100 jobs would be transferred but in the number of employes to be moved may not be more than 50. SCS has taken a licking from the war and today it has more than 2000 vacancies on its staff. Its young engineers and technicians are moving over to war work by the scores.

The loss of man power already has forced the Washington office to be reorganized. The field service will be given a drastic shaking up. Three large regional offices will be closed and 32 area offices will be shut down for the duration. Purpose behind the revamping is an attempt to place the service closer to the farmer and to give him more help on production and conservation problems. . . The Army each week is sending soldiers a newsmap which gives them the news highlights of the week.

Beat the Sugar Deadline

War time rationing of sweets was significant at the Montgomery County public health lay council's annual luncheon yesterday. No dessert was served. Mrs. Merhle Haines, president, said rather than raise the price of tickets the committee eliminated dessert. One hundred and fifty-eight were minus a sugar course.

Carrying It Too Far

Tire thieves, when apprehended, should be incarcerated for life, according to members of the Hawkins family, 905 Sligo Avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Their newly acquired ball-bearing, free-wheeling lawn mower was missed yesterday but recovered on the property after a diligent search. Both the rubber tires were missing.

Citizens Ask Crash Probe Unit Be Kept

Dupont Circle Association Elects Officers, Headed By W. C. Taylor

The Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday indorsed the Traffic Council's report favoring the retention of the Accident Investigation Unit, which the Commissioners had sought to disband.

Howard F. Wentworth, public relations officer of the District of Columbia Traffic Department, addressing the meeting, discussed the education program of the Traffic Department. He called attention to the increase in the number of accidents—they are double what they were last year at this time. The situation is being studied carefully, he declared, indicating that the increase in population is probably one of the causes.

At the annual election the following were chosen: William Clark Taylor, president; Luther Morris Leisenring, first vice president; Miss Essie Vaughan, second vice president; Rowland S. Marshall, secretary, and W. Herbert Gill, treasurer. Miss Leila Peachey, Woodson P. Houghton and Harral Milliken were elected to the executive committee.

Forest Hills

The Forest Hills Citizens Association voted its opposition last night to legislation which would permit householders in Class A and Class B residential zones to take in more than four roomers.

Such an amendment to the District zoning law, introduced by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee to relieve the housing shortage, would lower property values, the association held at its meeting in Ben Murch School, Thirty-sixth and Davenport Streets Northwest.

In other resolutions opposition was expressed to proposed rezoning of property at the southeast corner of Connecticut Avenue and Albemarle Streets Northwest to permit a temporary parking lot and regulations to require builders of houses and apartments to provide parking space were urged. The association also voted to ask the Senate District Committee to recommend funds for developing existing District playgrounds.

Charles A. Burmeister, president, and all other officers were reelected. Named to the executive committee were C. P. Reynolds, Paul Keen, Mrs. Blake Palm and Frank Shields.

Metropolis View

A committee to investigate the reported need for additional firemen in the District because of the city's population increase was established last night by the Metropolis View Citizens Association, meeting at 200 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

Franklin G. Sartwell will serve as chairman with H. G. Watson and Earl Pullin as members.

The association also nominated officers for election at the next meeting. Vincent P. Boudren was nominated for president; Philip R. Belt and Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, for vice president; Mrs. Pierce B. Butler, sr., and Mrs. W. S. Flinchum, for secretary, and Saviour Sidotti, for treasurer.

Takoma Park

The Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., last night adopted a resolution opposing the bill of Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, which would extend boarding-house privileges to areas zoned residential A.

The resolution contended that the legislation would destroy the residential characteristics of many neighborhoods.

Manor Park Citizens

James T. Scott, sr., was relected president of the Manor Park Citizens Association at its meeting last night in the Whittier School, Fifth and Sheridan Streets Northwest.

Other officers reelected included Miss Elsie E. Green, second vice president; George A. Corbin, recording secretary, and T. W. Buckley, treasurer. R. J. LaVallee was chosen for a first term as first vice president and Mrs. W. E. Ward was newely elected corresponding secrtary. Scott and Corbin were chosen delegates to the District Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association voted to recess until the second Monday in September.

Firemen Chase Blazing Truck, Quench Blaze

A burning paper truck led District firemen on a three-block chase last night but they caught it and put out the flames.

It started when Raymond Clipper, 20, of 1140 Twenty-first Street Northwest, drove past Seventh and K Streets Northwest in a Silver Falls Paper Co. truck the cargo of which was aflame.

A pedestrian, Robert Thomas, of 426 K Street Northwest, saw the smoke and yelled. Clipper, aware of the fire, was headed for the paper company office at 472 L Street Northwest, where he knew there was a firebox. So he ignored the warning. But Thomas ran to Sixth and K and turned in an alarm. When firemen arrived, he pointed in the direction the paper truck had taken.

The firefighters caught the fugitive fire at the paper company and went to work. They were joined by a contingent of fellow firemen. Clipper already had turned in the alarm there.

Jam Sours Sugar Registration, Thousands Wait in Line

as scheduled, Cantrell said he would appeal today for 4000 additional volunteers. The bulk of these would be sought, he said, from the Parent-Teacher Associations and other civic groups.

Cantrell praised the work of the teachers, who are conducting the registration without remuneratiin, and expressed the hope that the public would take this fact into consideration before placing the blame for the confusion on the teachers or the volunteers who did appear.

Early Closing Reported

Told of complaints received by The Post from persons who said they were denied registration in some cases as early as 8:15 p. m., Cantrell said he had instructed some of the registrars to close their doors at 8:45 p. m. and wind up the night's work by registering those already in the building. He said he was almost positive, however, that nobody had been turned away earlier.

A typical complaint telephoned to The Post was that of a man who said he was denied entrance to the Magruder School, Seventeenth and M Streets Northwest, at 8:20 o'clock, along with at least 100 other persons.

A woman who registered at the Cook School, Seventeenth and Euclid Streets Northwest, said she and many other applicants were denied registration after 8:15 o'clock.

An exception was the Grant School, Twenty-first and G Streets Northwest, where 200 persons were still awaiting registration when the doors were closed at 9 o'clock. They were told, however, that they would be taken care of if the registrars had "to stay here until midnight."

The Grant School situation also contrasted sharply with confusion in evidence at other schools. Miss Constance Cooper, 314 Second Street Northeast, one of 45 Wilson Teachers College students helping out at that school, said she had practically no trouble. Several other volunteers corroborated her statement, reporting little if any delay, although more than 3500 citizens registered at that location.

Many Came Early

At John Quincy Adams School, Nineteenth and California Streets, Northwest, some 1200 persons had gathered at the entrance before the doors were opened. Once inside, several hundred had already filled out their application forms before the ration books arrived for distribution.

Yesterday's registration was for persons whose names begin with the letters "A" to "E." The "F" to "L" groups will register today, the "M" to "R" groups tomorrow and the "S" to "Z" groups Thursday.

Registration hours are from 4 to 9 p. m., and individuals as well as family groups are requested to register. A whole family need not appear, one member at least 18 years old being permitted to obtain books for an entire family.

Registrants are required to give such personal history as their names, addresses, height, weight, age, color of hair and eyes and the amount of sugar, if any, they now have in their possession.

Those who registered yesterday can now buy sugar legally, the sales ban having been lifted today at one minute past midnight. Everybody is entitled to a half-pound per week, though the actual distribution will be at the rate of 1 pound every two weeks.

Registrants are permitted to have on hand a maximum of 6 pounds of sugar for each member of a family unit. If the registrant has more than that amount, no ration book will be issued until the sugar store has fallen to 5 pounds. He or she may then present the book at a grocery and buy 1 pound to reach again the 6-pound maximum.

Child Labor Law Change Is Opposed

Randolph Meets With Welfare and Club Leaders to Discuss the Subject

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday met with a group of Washington club and welfare leaders who expressed their opposition to any changes in local child labor laws at this time.

Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of public schools, last week told the District Committee that possibly some changes should be made for the duration of the war to meet pressing employment needs.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech was asked to consult with Dr. Ballou and prepare tentative legislation for committee consideration. The Board of Education is expected to consider the problems at a meeting tomorrow.

The present law permits employment of boys and girls between 14 and 17 years of age, if they have been granted work permits by the Board of Education to do jobs which have the approval of the board and are subject to its supervision. No girl under 18 years of age nor boy under 16 may be employed later than 7 p. m., however.

Dr. Ballou pointed out that this provision conflicted with the wartime measure of keeping department stores open on Thursday nights.

Conferring with Representative Randolph were Mrs. C. D. Lowe, former president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. William H. Hill of the Children's Protective Association; Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg; Mrs. John H. Rogers; Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the Minimum Wage Board of the District; Mrs. E. M. McKelway of the District League of Women Voters; Edward Ackerman, secretary of the Family Welfare Division of the Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. O. G. Hankins of the Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Lillian Detre of the Council of Jewish Women; Mrs. Floyd Dell; Lydia A. H. Burklin of Friendship House; Mary Stuart Chamberlain, chairman of the Georgetown Neighborhood Council, and Mrs. Walter Ufford.

Members of the delegation said they had held no meetings of their organizations on the subject yet, but were acting quickly to head off any possible changes. Some said they would not be opposed to changes if needed, but declared no such need existed at present. Fourteen States have more stringent child labor laws than the District, they said.

D.C. Fire Safety Bill Hearing Set in Senate

A hearing on the District bill to regulate fire protection facilities in buildings three or more stories high and having "sleeping accommodations for ten or more persons above the first floor" will be held by a Senate subcommittee at 10:30 a. m. Thursday.

Senator Biblo (Democrat), Mississippi, is chairman of the subcommittee. Other members are Senator Hughes (Democrat), Delaware, and Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont.

Citizens' associations have been asked to send representatives, if they have opinions on the measure—which was designed to meet problems growing out of the rooming house situation brought on by the emergency. Others who will appear include: Arthur B. Heaton, president of the Washington Building Congress; Charles J. Rush, of the Washington Real Estate Board; Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, of the Washington Housing Association, and a representative of the Bureau of Standards.

Private residences would not be affected by the proposed bill, but hospitals, schools, asylums, sanitariums, and structures used for similar purposes would be.

Under its provisions, the District Commissioners could designate "such appliances as they may deem necessary," in addition to a municipal fire-alarm connection or a fire-alarm system reporting through a private central station connected with the municipal fire-alarm headquarters.

Canoe Swamps, Man Believed Lost in Falls

Edmund L. Wiblitzhouser, 31, of 349 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, was believed drowned last night when he fell from a canoe and was swept away in the rapids of the Potomac River about a mile north of Key Bridge.

Wiblitzhouser

Wiblitzhouser, a civilian employe of the Quartermaster Corps at Fort Myer, had gone fishing with Private William E. Rowe, 32, of the 176th Infantry at Fort Myer. The two men had struck up an acquaintance earlier in the day at a Rosslyn (Va.) restaurant and Wiblitzhouser had invited Rowe on the fishing trip, the latter told police.

The canoe capsized, Rowe said, when Wiblitzhouser stood up in the bow. He disappeared after trying to grasp the overturned craft. Rowe was able to cling to the canoe until rescued by another fisherman.

Wiblitzhouser, the father of two children, lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wiblitzhouser, at the Kentucky Avenue address. His father is a retired musician who formerly was in the Marine Band.

Derailment Blocks Traffic on R. F. & P.

Bowling Green, Va., May 4 (AP).—Two cars on a northbound freight train were derailed on the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway at Milford Station, near here, at 6:30 p. m. Sunday, blocking traffic on the double track line for about three hours.

The derailment of the cars, loaded with oranges, was blamed on a broken wheel.

Elizabeth Somers' Glee Club, Sinfonietta Present Program

Elizabeth Somers Glee Club (Mary M. Burnett, director) and Washington Sinfonietta (Van Lier Lanning, director) presents a concert Monday night in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A. Program: Incidental music to Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and choral numbers by Sullivan, Rowley, Treharne, Krone, Nevin, Ware and Curran.

Mary M. Burnett director of the Elizabeth Somers Glee Club of the Young Women's Christian Association, had a happy idea for the annual spring concert of the organization in Barker Hall last evening. By inviting the cooperation of Van Lier Lanning and his Washington Sinfonietta, she was able to give the audience a rare experience, that of hearing practically all of Mendelssohn's incidental music to Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Certain orchestral pieces from that work are played to death, but it is very seldom that the remainder of the score is performed.

BROWN

Remarkable as the overture is as the creation of a 17-year-old lad, one wonders still more that Mendelssohn was able 17 years later to use the ideas with the same freshness of fancy when he composed the 13 numbers interspersed through the play. To hear most of these numbers immediately after the overture was to realize the perfection of a feat in expansion and in integration of a poetic conception.

While Mr. Lanning scrambled the order a little by playing the intermezzo before the scherzo, he directed nine of the numbers, and in so doing introduced to many of his hearers for the first time the Fairies' March, the humorous Funeral March (bassoon and clarinet) for Pyramus and Thisbe, and the Dance of the Clowns. The four instrumental pieces to be omitted are short accompaniments to the stage action. With the glee club he also gave the two choral numbers: "You Spotted Snakes With Double Tongue" and "Through the House Give Glimmering Light."

In the first part of the program Miss Burnett directed her well-trained singers in seven pleasant songs. From England she chose Sullivan's "Braid the Raven Hair" from "The Mikado" and Alex Rowley's "Love Lives Over the Hills." Folksongs from Mexico and Venezuela, "The Evening Breeze" and "Poll Perica," were sung in arrangements by Bryceson Treharne and Beatrice Krone. Songs by American composers constituted the last group: Ethelbert Nevin's "A Dutch Lullaby," Harriet Wares "Boat Song" and Pearl Curran's "Nocturne."

City's Policemen and Postmen Test Reclaimed Rubber Heels

Washington's policemen and postmen are now assuming the added role of perambulating laboratories in a project to test the serviceability of reclaimed rubber, the consumer division of the Office of Price Administration announced last night.

Casting about for guinea pigs to try out reclaimed rubber wear and durability in shoe heels, the division found the Capital's pavement-pounding civil servants as ideal testers. The experiment was begun on April 18, when some of the subjects took their shoes to repair shops and had the heels replaced with samples made from somebody's old tires and galoshes.

Later, the peripatetic scientists will answer questionnaires giving average mileage of their daily beats, the length of their normal stride and the beginning and end of the testing period.

These statistics will be translated into the number of steps taken by each wearer, and the heels will then be examined as to wear and condition. Results, the division said, will be useful to shoe manufacturers, repair men and also consumers, who will be assured of definite standards of quality for the prices they pay.

The experiment resulted from the War Production Board's ban on crude rubber for shoe heels, which means that manufacturers now must use reclaimed rubber. Since this is a new product, the consumer division undertook to find out how good it is.

The experiment, the division said, will aid in eliminating waste of rubber, and may show that certain types of heels are "overbuilt" and might wear just as well if they contained smaller quantities of rubber. Or, the division admitted, the worn underpinnings of the testers may show that certain types of reprocessed rubber do not stand up under wear at all.

WPB to Seize And Junk Auto 'Graveyard'

The War Production Board's industrial conservation division prepared last night to conduct its first seizure in this area of an auto "graveyard" whose owner allegedly declined to sell the junked cars so that the scrap could be used for war purposes.

The requisitioning, scheduled for 3 p. m. today, will apply to some 200 to 300 auto wrecks in the yards of the Lenox Motor Co., at Colmar Manor, Md., on the Baltimore Pike.

According to WPB officials, the owner of the scrapped autos, Leo F. Donovan, refused offers from scrap dealers which conformed to the official ceiling prices set by the Office of Price Administration and at which other graveyard owners have sold their stocks.

Donovan, however, told The Post last night that he had notified a scrap dealer of his acceptance of an offer, but that the scrap dealer had "backed down" pending a further investigation of the graveyard. Donovan also declared that he had told WPB officials he would sell the cars if he were allowed first to strip them of their useful parts and accessories.

Pointing out that he had paid from $35 to $400 per car, he argued that he could not afford to sell them at scrap metal prices without first stripping them. Labor for this job, he said, was not available at once.

The WPB estimated that there were about 150 tons of iron and steel scrap in Donovan's yard and about 7 tons of other metals. This material is needed at once for resmelting into munitions products, a spokesman said.

According to the requisitioning authority under which the WPB plans to move the concern's scrap, the sheriff of Prince Georges County will sell the jalopies and pay over the proceeds to Donovan.

Doerr Has Perfect Day as Bosox Down Tribe

3 Safeties Help in 11-8 Judgment

Trio of Cleveland Home Runs Futile; Newsome Survives For 4th Straight

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 4.—Bobby Doerr, the American League's leading slugger, turned in a perfect performance at the plate today while pacing the Boston Red Sox to an 11-8 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Doerr, who has hit safely in 10 straight games, collected two singles and a double with the bases loaded out of three trips to boost his average to .465.

While going down to their second straight defeat at Fenway, the Indians out-hit the Sockers, 15-11, and were supplied with homers by Jeff Heath, Ray Mack and Otto Denning, all made against Dick Newsome with the bases empty.

Newsome, who was credited with his fourth straight win, had the game well in hand until the eighth, when he was replaced by Tex Hughson after setting the stage for the Indians' four-run rally.

Lefty Al Milnar opened for Cleveland but was so wild that the Red Sox collected six runs on five passes, a hit batter and three hits, the third of which was Doerr's two-bagger with Ted Williams, Jimmy Foxx and Pete Fox on base after Milnar forced in Boston's third run in that frame by passing Fox.

The Red Sox clinched the game against Right-hander Steve Gromek in the seventh, when they tallied three times on singles by Jim Tabor, Dom DiMaggio and Doerr and Fox's triple.

Manager Lou Boudreau was charged with both of the Cleveland errors and the Sociers totaled three miscues as Rookie Johnny Pesky tried to set them an example by handling 11 chances in flawless fashion at shortstop.

'Impoliteness' To Umps Costs 4 Dodgers $125

By International News Service

New York, May 4.—Manager Leo Durocher and three other Brooklyn Dodgers were fined today by President Ford Frick of the National League as a result of a disturbance yesterday in the doubleheader with the Cardinals at St. Louis.

Durocher was fined $50 as a followup to his being banished from the field during the first game of the twin bill, while Dolph Camilli, first baseman; Fred Fitzsimmons, veteran pitcher and coach, and Chester Kehn, rookie pitcher, each drew $25 fines.

All were thumber off the field in an argument with the umpires, as were Manager Billy Southworth of the Cardinals and Pitcher Whit Wyatt of the Dodgers. The latter two were not punished further by Frick inasmuch as they left the field when ordered to do so.

The trouble started when Terry Moore walked on four straight pitches by Wyatt in the first inning of the first game, and Durocher bounced off the bench and onto the field. Umpire Ziggy Sears promptly shooed him off the field and out of the Dodger dugout, but not without a heated protest from Durocher.

The $50 fine against him was in keeping with the new rule against managers delaying the game on balls and strikes decisions.

Jimmy Dykes Fined $50 for Wrangling

New York, May 4 (AP).—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox was notified today that he had been fined $50 for his impoliteness to Umpire Ed Rommell yesterday. Dykes was ordered from the field for disputing a decision in the second game of yesterday's double defeat.

Yankees Option Infielder Ed Levy To Kansas City

New York, May 4.—The New York Yankees today announced that First Baseman Ed Levy had been optioned to their Kansas City farm in the American Association.

Levy, who played with Kansas City last year, played first base in the Yanks' first 13 games but batted only .122. He was supplanted by the more experienced Buddy Hassett, obtained from the Boston Braves during the winter.

Rut Coffey, Harper Win Other Places

Worsham and Gibson Lose to Harper's 35 in Play-Off; Cox In but Withdraws

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Major cities in the Middle Atlantic section went unplaced in the National P. G. A. Championship in yesterday's sectional qualifying rounds at Burning Tree. Errie Ball of Charlottesville, Va., Rut Coffey of Hagerstown, Md., and Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., finished in that order to win the three allotted berths.

In addition, Privates Jack Isaacks, Langley Field, Va., and Hugh McClellan, Edgewood Arsenal, Md., were assured places. An order came through yesterday morning that active members in the services would be exempt from the sectional trials. Both expect to make the Atlantic City championship play starting May 25.

Ball Posts a 139

Washington, Baltimore and Richmond representatives were conspicuously missing among the place winners as Ball, the slight blond pro from Farmington C. C., a C. A. A. student, took advantage of fast scoring conditions to romp around the par 72 layout in 69 and 70 for 139, and Coffey was right on his heels all day with a pair of 70s for 149 to make his third P. G. A. championship in four years.

Harper, the outstanding favorite, won his berth the hard way after playing sloppy golf, but getting down in subpar figures for the regulation 36 holes, 71-72, 143. Host Pro Lewis Worsham, jr., and Baltimore's Andy Gibson matched his total as did Wiffy Cox of Congressional, but Cox begged out of the nine-hole play-off as business would prevent him from making the trip if he won.

Harper Dominates Play-off

The late afternoon play-off was all Harper's as he led both Worsham and Gibson by three shots at the end of five holes and finished with a 1-under par 35 to their 38's. Harper ran into a double-bogey 5 on the par 3 eighth hole, where he was trapped and blasted over the green, but he was too far ahead to lose his advantage at the time.

Ball, who seldom plays in the Middle Atlantic events, made few mistakes as he rapped in eight birdies and an eagle in the 36 holes and finished 5 under par, losing just a few shots around the green.

Yankees Beat White Sox, 6-1; Chandler Wins

By the Associated Press

New York, May 4.—The New York Yankees humbled the Chicago White Sox again today, 6 to 1, for the American League tail-enders' fourth setback in a new losing streak.

The Sox now have been beaten 11 times in their last 12 games and 16 out of 20 for the season. They would have been shutout today, too, for the fifth time except for an error by Yankee Shortstop Phil Rizzuto with two out in the ninth.

Spud Chandler kept seven hits scattered and never was in danger because his teammates gave him a run in the first inning and batted around for five more in the third, which Frankie Crosetti climaxed with a two-run triple.

Joe Haynes, who replaced John Humphries at the start of the fourth, held the champions scoreless the rest of the way.

Cincinnati Nears League Record for Runs in One Inning; Score Is 15-4; Error, Walks Help

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 4.—The usually docile Cincinnati Reds ripped off 12 runs in the fourth inning today and rolled on to a 15-to-4 triumph over the New York Giants.

The big blasting, during which the Reds' entire batting order came up twice, came within two runs of the modern major league record for the most scoring in a single inning.

Cincinnati made only six hits, including Eddie Joost's triple with the bases loaded, but they were helped by three errors and four bases on balls. Three runs were forced across the plate by walks and another by a hit batsman.

Fiddler Bill McGee did not allow a hit in the first three frames, but neither he nor Hugh East could get anyone out in the fifth and Harry Feldman was scarcely any better in finishing.

Ray Starr wen the whole route for the Reds, scattering eight hits, including a homer by Willard Marshall.

Nats and Yankees Switch Game to Aid Navy Fund

New York, May 4.—So as to give the Navy Relief Fund game between the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants at Ebbets Field Friday a clear field, President Ed Barrow of the New York Yankees today postponed the world champions' game with Washington. The game will be played as a part of a double-header Sunday.

The Yanks will play their Army and Navy Relief Fund game against the Nats at the Stadium August 22.

Jockey Palumbo Slightly Injured In Auto Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., May 4.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo escaped serious injury this afternoon when his car left route 26 near Unionville, Md., and crashed into a power pole. At Frederick City Hospital Palumbo was treated for lacerations about the head and face and later discharged to continue to Charles Town, W. Va., where he plans to ride in the race meet opening there next Monday.

Palumbo told State Trooper William M. Houck that he fell asleep at the wheel of his car while en route from Baltimore to Charles Town. The machine left the highway, struck the pole and overturned.

'Poughkeepsie' Race Doomed, Survey Shows

By the Associated Press

New York, May 4.—Even a change in date and site may not be enough to keep the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta, known more familiarly as the Poughkeepsie, on the 1942 sports calendar, a survey by the Associated Press showed tonight.

Earlier in the day Asa Bushnell, secretary of the association, said that "nothing definite has been decided, but Lake Onondaga (at Syracuse, N. Y.) and June 6 look like the date and site" if the event is to be held.

In previous years the race was rowed on the Hudson River near Poughkeepsie late in June. Bushnell said the association was polling its members to determine their attitudes toward the early date and new site.

The Associated Press poll of the 11 competitors in recent years, however, showed that only two schools approved entirely, two others were opposed, Wisconsin officials couldn't make up their minds either way and that the six remaining institutions were inclined to pass up the event but had not decided definitely.

Two Upstate Schools Say O. K.

Syracuse and Cornell, both Upstate New York schools, are the two who favored the changes and promised to attend. Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the United States Naval Academy were opposed, Navy pointing out the proposed date conflicted with the start of final examinations.

Princeton, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Rutgers also have moved up their examinations and the early date would conflict enough to make their appearances unlikely, officials said, although all declared that no definite decisions had yet been made.

Instead of the educational speed up prevalent along the Eastern Seaboard, the school year has been lengthened at the University of California and the University of Washington and Coach Al Ulbrickson at Seattle said that "June 20 would be about the earliest date we could meet in the East."

War activity along the Hudson River has made it impractical as a site for the usual 4-mile jaunt and Syracuse offered its 3-mile Lake Onondaga course as a substitute site.

Pirates Edge Braves, 2 to 1; Half Game Out

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, May 4.—Ebbie Fletcher's ninth-inning single gave the Pirates a 2-to-1 victory over Jim Tobin and the Boston Braves today. The victory brought the Buccos to within a half game of the idle first-place Dodgers.

Bob Klinger, making his first start of the year, held the Braves to four hits going into the ninth and was leading, 1 to 0, when Pinch-Hitter Clyde Kluttz singled home the tying run with two out.

Eppie Miller paved the way for the winning tally. He fumbled Bob Elliott's grounder with one out in the ninth and Vince DiMaggio singled him to third. Fletcher rode Tobin's first pitch down the right-field line to knock in the deciding run.

The Pirates nicked Tobin for a run in the sixth on Coscarart's single, a sacrifice and Wasell's single. Lombardi doubled for the Braves with one out in the first half of the ninth and after West fouled out, Pinch Hitter Cuccinello walked. Kluttz rapped a single through the box to send in the tying run.

Hornsby Launces His Comeback in Rousing Fashion

Houston, Tex., May 4.—Middle-aged Rogers Hornsby, who was a terror in the National League as a baseball player a generation ago, demonstrated there was life in the old body yet by smashing out a ninth-inning single to lead his Fort Worth Cats to a 3-1 victory over Houston in the second game of a Texas League double-header yesterday.

The Rajah, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals until his penchant for betting on the hosses got him in trouble, struck out twice and lined once to left field.

Finding runners on second and third in the ninth inning, he brought in two runs to clinch the game and celebrate his return to active duty.

Indians Send Catcher To Baltimore Orioles

Cleveland, May 4 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians today optioned Catcher Jim Hegan to Baltimore, subject to 24-hour recall. Hegan will join the International League team at Buffalo Wednesday.

This reduced Cleveland's roster to 28 men—1 more than the limit.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This week's Preakness would seem to be the proving ground for a lot of things that happened and didn't happen in the Kentucky Derby. Is the Derby winner, Shut Out, a better horse than his stablemate, Devil Diver? Suppose Alsab had had clear sailing in the Derby? Is Requested a sulker? What if Sun Again goes to the post in the Preakness? The Pimlico race may hold all the answers.

POVICH

When Shut Out led the Derby Field home while his more illustrious stablemate finished a laboring sixth, it wasn't the first time in an important race, or even in Derby history, that the despised half of an entry did the best running. When Shut Out went after the leaders at Churchill Downs it was seemingly obvious to the thousands in the stands that he was out only to carry the pace until Devil Diver could come along to take it all, and you could have knocked over the handicappers with a $2.20 mutuel ticket when Shut Out stayed in front to win going away.

Fifteen years ago, Col. Bradley sent Behave Yourself and Black Servant to the post as a Derby entry, with Black Servant supposedly the horse to watch. In fact, Gambler Bradley had a sock on Black Servant in the winter book at juicy odds. Bradley won the Derby but lost his Winter Book bet, because Chris Thompson, on Behave Yourself, stuck it out with his mount to beat Black Servant, ridden by Harry Lyke. One after-the-race story had it that Thompson didn't know that the horse lapped on him at the finish was Black Servant, which finished second, and was running for Bradley's big bet.

Arcaro Confident of Devil Diver

Mrs. Dodge Sloan won with Cavalcade in the 1934 Kentucky Derby, but the next week at Pimlico, she started both Cavalcade and High Quest in the Preakness. Cavalcade was supposed to win that one, too, with High Quest in there to cut out the pace, but at the finish it was High Quest still on top.

If Shut Out is, indeed, a better colt than Devil Diver, then the most painfully fooled individual is Eddie Arcaro who, as the Whitney Stable's contract rider, had his choice of the two mounts and took Devil Diver, leaving Shut Out for Wayne Wright. One of the reasons that Devil Diver is still regarded as a potent Preakness threat is Arcaro, who has been around race horses a long time and was able to study both Devil Diver and Shut Out at close hand.

If there had been any great doubt in Arcaro's mind that he was not choosing the better mount for himself, he could have, as the stable rider, made a bargain with Wright to split the jockey's 10 per cent of the purse if either stablemate won. But Arcaro was so confident of Devil Diver's apparent superiority that he refused to hedge, and thus got no part of Wright's $6400 fee.

There isn't any doubt that Devil Diver was short, but the mile and three-sixteenths of the Preakness, a sixteenth shorter than the Derby, may suit him better. Arcaro still has the privilege of riding Shut Out in the Preakness, if he prefers, but thus far he hasn't exercised it, and the confidence he is showing in Devil Diver certainly won't shorten that steed's Preakness odds.

Alsab, too, may like the shorter distance of the Preakness. Off his Derby race, Alsab certainly will go to the post at Pimlico as second choice. What happened to the Sabath colt at the start is a bit vague. The chart notes made no reference to any bumping he suffered at the start, but the sharp-eyed Clem McCarthy in his broadcast observed positively that Alsab was shuffled around after getting out of the gate.

Alsab Stable Could Halt Criticism

The little Sabath colt might have been pounds the best in the Derby. He had to take up a bit going around the first turn, and after he made the best move in the race, he was carried wide going into the stretch. The pictures show him finishing far on the outside of the track, indicative of the ground he lost, and with a better break in the racing luck, he may have headed Shut Out despite that colt's own game finish.

A Preakness victory for Alsab would halt the sharp criticism that has greeted his handling. The colt that couldn't lose a race last summer, can't win one this year, and his eight straight defeats are attributed to too much racing. However, the move he showed in the Derby is distinctly in his favor and his handlers could gloat if he gets down in front in the Preakness.

Requested was the biggest disappointment in the Derby field with his inability to stick his nose into anything better than eighth place at any time. Backed into second choice at 5 to 1, the Texas colt finished last but one in the 15-horse field and his backers got no run for their money. His trainer, Blackie McCoole, pointed out that Requested had a rough trip and refused to extend himself. If he comes up to the Preakness in the mood, he is a starter to contend with.

The week between the Derby and the Preakness may be the item that will put Warren Wright's Sun Again in competition for the Preakness purse. Sun Again wasn't ready for the Derby and was scratched. His barn said bluntly that he was a week or two away from top form. If they feel that the week's interim gives him a chance to win the Preakness, he'll start, and it would be no stunning surprise to see him, off his 2-year-old form, take it all.

Nats' Kvasnak Farmed Out; Browns Here for Game Today

In what has been interpreted in some quarters as a move to strengthen Washington's fifth-place ball team, the Nats yesterday announced the release of Outfielder Alex Kvasnak to their Charlotte, N. C. farm.

Kvasnak was an importation from Newport, Ky., in the Class D Appalachain League, and after a brief and dismal trial during the absence of the injured George Case from the Nats' outfield, is being farmed out for more seasoning.

The move strips down the Washington outfield to four players—the regulars, Bruce Campbell, Stan Spence and George Case—and Utility Outfielder Roberto Ortiz.

Case is expected to return to the Nats' line-up today against the St. Louis Browns following a four-day absence with a shoulder injury suffered while sliding. Bruce Campbell, who has been risiking life and limb in a valiant attempt to play Case's sun field, will return to his right-field job.

Yesterday's scheduled game with the Browns was washed out by heavy pre-game showers and the two teams will play a single engagement today in their battle for fifth place which the Nats hold by a half-game margin.

Early Wynn, hero of a 1-0 victory over the White Sox in his last start, will be today's Washington pitcher. He will be opposed by Bob Harris, St. Louis right-hander.

Manager Bucky Harris now believes it a high possibility that Frank Croucher, who has been useless to the club so far, will be able to join the line-up this week. Croucher's throwing arm showed improvement in a brief workout yesterday, and he will be installed at second base.

Jimmy Pofahl, who has seemingly edged out Bob Repass for the short-stop job, has stepped up the Washington infield's double-play production in recent games. Repass may be moved to third base and Bob Estalella reconverted to the outfield, Harris hints.

Clark Griffith announced yesterday that the Nats' scheduled game with the Yankees at Yankee Stadium on Friday has been moved up as part of a double header on the following Sunday.

"Mr. Barrow and I agreed on the change," said Griffith, "in view of the fact that on Friday the Giants and Dodgers will be playing an Army-Navy Relief Fund game at Ebbetts Field. We do not want to play our game as a counter-attraction to any such worthy cause and have decided to make Friday an open date."

Shut Out Heads Arrivals at Pimlico for Rich Preakness

Derby King Ships Well; Five Arrive

Sun Again Is Only One Ailing After Louisville Trip; Whirlaway Arrives

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 4.—Without any fanfare whatever, Shut Out, the Kentucky Derby hero, arrived today at Pimlico, where he'll try Saturday to pick up another rich purse in the Preakness Stakes.

Two tow-headed little boys in ragged overalls, a black and white mongrel pup, and a handful of photographers and reporters were the only ones on hand at Mount Washington Station to greet Mrs. Payne Whitney's colt.

In fact, Shut Out came to town from Louisville with much less ado than usually attends the arrival of a Derby winner. He stepped off the train like any casual visitor and was led into a van with no fuss at all. He looked as fit as a horse can be.

Devil Diver Tags Along

In the same car with him was his stablemate, Devil Diver, both of them in charge of Lee Cotton, assistant to Trainer John M. Gaver. Cotton said both colts stood the trip well.

Also arriving with the Greentree pair were William Woodward's Apache and Mrs. Barclay Douglas' Fair Call, both considered certain starters in the mile and three-sixteenths run for the Preakness' $50,000-added pot.

A couple of hours later another train brought in Sun Again, Warren Wright's Preakness hope which was scratched from the Derby. With him was the handsome Whirlaway, the Calumet Farm's big threat in Wednesday's $20,000-added Dixie Handicap.

Sun Again didn't ship well, and Trainer Ben A. Jones said he wasn't certain whether he would start him in the Preakness.

Alsab Among Absentees

By midweek the Preakness colony will be complete. Yet to come in are Albert Sabath's Alsab and Emerson F. Woodward's Valdina Orphan, which took second and third money, respectively, in the Derby.

Others expected are Ben F. Whitaker's Requested, William du Pont, jr.'s Fairy Manah, R. Sterling Clark's Colchis and possibly Walter P. Chrysler's Bleu D'Or.

Eddie Arcaro's decision to stick to Devil Diver, his disappointing Derby mount, although he could ride Shut Out, came as a surprise to race followers who had expected him to switch to the Derby winner for the Preakness.

It made them wonder whether the stable still considered Devil Diver the better of the two. He was tabbed as Greentree's main Derby threat but at the end it was Shut Out which was in the winner's spot with Devil Diver sixth.

Ralph Hutton Tops Handicap Bowling

The College Park handicap at Charley Gentile's alleys was topped by Ralph Hutton with a gross set of 442 that won him $20. Second place went to Bob Henshaw, whose 416 took down $8. Others in the money were: Al Sanders, 408, $6; Bob Workman, 405, $5; George Wilsher, 399, $4, and high game of 138 won Gordy Remsburg, $3. The event will be continued next Sunday.

Dome Oilers Win Flag

The Dome Oil quintet won the pennant in the Ice Palace Commercial League with American Valet and the Hot Shoppes teams finishing second and third, respectively. Eddie Keith won the high average laurels with 122, only a few pins ahead of Fred Murphy, now in the arms service.

D. C. Odd Fellows Bow

Washington Odd Fellows met defeat in their intercity tournament with the Baltimore lodge, losing both matches by a total of 571 pins. It was the fourth defeat for the local boys in 17 years of bowling. Both Chalmers Groff and Frank Burgess had 140 to lead the local boys with Burgess and Scorer Perce Ellett winning honors with scores of 380. Lefty Bronmaier's 160 and "Butch" Oxley's 389 topped the visitors.

Heckert Horn continued his top-flight performances to take the shot put and discus.

Norm Rathbun supplemented his brother's activities with a win in the javelin and a third behind his brother in the discus.

A measure of satisfaction went to the hosts despite the varsity's loss when the Terp frosh, paced by Haggerman and Hanson, pulled out a 63-45 decision over the Cavalier yearlings. Haggerman captured the high jump and low hurdles and placed second in the javelin and broad jump. Hanson's wins came in the 100 and 220.

Sligo A. C. gained an even break in its double bill with Bethesda-Chevy Chase Sunday. After losing the first game, 7-6 in 10 innings, Sligo was awarded the second game by the umpire by a score of 6-4, when the opposing team left the field during a Sligo rally.

Strong V.P.I. Nine Smashes Maryland, 13-1

The V. P. I. Gobblers gave Maryland's baseball team a 13-1 shellacking at College Park yesterday, the outcome of the contest being decided in the first inning when Hugh Ryan walked, Buddy Henderson doubled, and Judy Rubin singled to drive in both runs.

Three Maryland pitchers were used, but none could hold the Techmen to less than two hits in three innings. Ken Fussell went all the way on the mound for the visitors, scattering seven Terp hits effectively enough to allow the lone run in the ninth.

Roscoe Whipp scored Maryland's run on a single by Duvall after singling himself.

Middies Boast Near-Perfect Sports Record

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, May 4.—Spring sports at the United States Naval Academy have only three more weeks to run but there's nothing rival squads can do to dampen the great record midshipmen athletes already have compiled.

Thirty-eight varsity contests have gone by the boards and Navy has won 35 decisions. The three setbacks are charged to the baseball and track squads but in the light of recent performances nobody's holding the reverses against them.

The five undefeated squads and their records are lacrosse (6-0); tennis (8-0); crew (3-0); golf (4-0), and dinghy (3-0).

Navy's baseball team, beaten earlier by Harvard and Pennsylvania, hung up its sixth straight triumph and ninth in the last 10 games, edging William and Mary, 2 to 1, Saturday. The tracksters, third in a quadrangular meet at Philadelphia last month, outdistanced North Carolina's cindermen over the weekend for their second triumph of the campaign.

Princeton's weekend triumph over Maryland's touted lacrossemen at College Park has midshipmen speculating over Navy's chances against the strong Tiger stickmen in next Saturday's academy feature. Other highlight 8Rsm'sLetao ture.

Other highlights this week include the baseballers' quest for additional victories, Wednesday, against Gettysburg (Pa.) College and Saturday against Virginia; important tennis matches with Carnegie Tech, Wednesday, and Columbia, Saturday at New York, and the Duke-Navy track meet Saturday in Thompson Stadium.

Unison Show Title Goes to Gee Ray Bee

By M. Grace Brooks

Unison, Va., May 4.—Gee Ray Bee, a 6-year-old chestnut gelding, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle, of Washington, won the championship of the nineteenth Unison Charity Horse Show held today on the school grounds, after he tied for the coveted honor with Springsbury Farms' Sandern. Gee Ray Bee won his honors in the middle and heavyweight hunter class with Frost Anderson in the saddle and in the ladies' hunters when he was ridden by Miss Margaret Cotter of Washington.

Sandern, also a chestnut and a 3-year-old, won a first in the 3 and 4-year-old hunter class, and also won a second and a third ribbon, giving him an equal number of points with Gee Ray Bee. This was Sandern's first time in the show ring and he made a good showing in all his classes, giving promise of greater things in future shows. He is by Sun Utar out of a Light Brigade mare, and was ridden by Joe Ferguson in today's events. Reserve ribbon was won by Sanders.

Good performances marked the show today, which was held before a fair-sized crowd of sporting people from this section. The hunter hack class had 20 entries and they performed in splendid manner, with Frost Anderson's Little Brother, ridden by the owner, taking first place. Also was the ladies' hunters a large class, with Gee Ray Bee winning the honors there. Second and third places in this class were won by Benton Stables' Woodrock and Sylvan Queen. Both horses were ridden by Miss Averll Penn-Smith, who also had the mount on a number of other horses, riding all in the same splendid manner in which she won the Foxcroft School horsemanship prize last year.

Ring Carnival Ticket Sale Starts Today

Tickets for the boxing carnival to be sponsored by the Washington Citizens Committee for Navy Relief at Griffith Stadium on Thursday night, May 21, go on sale at Griffith Stadium this morning at 9 o'clock, priced at $2.30, $4, $6 and $10.

No favorites will be played in the handling of tickets, the early purchasers being promised the best seats.

Griffith Stadium will be scaled to gross $120,000 for this fistic benefit, and Jacobs is confident of a net gate of not less than $75,000.

The carnival cofeatures ten-round bouts bringing together Lou Nova vs. Lee Savold, heavyweights, and Steve Mamakos vs. George Abrams, middleweights.

In one eight-round number Jimmy DeChard, local heavyweight, boxes Frank Poreda, while a substitute bout is being arranged to replace the one tentatively scheduled previously between Tommy Tucker and Maynard Daniels, heavyweights. A six-round opening number involves Sammy Margo, Birmingham middleweight, and Frankie Wills.

Kapovich Is Kayoed Third Time by Brooks

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Louis Brooks, 182, slugging Wilmington, Del., Negro, knocked out Private Johnny Kapovich, 201, Baltimore, in 30 seconds of the first round of the scheduled 12-round bout tonight.

It was the third time Brooks had kayoed his Baltimore rival, who was granted leave from the Army at Fort Bragg, N. C., to come here for the fight.

Spoldi Close Victor Over Robinson

New York, May 4.—Aldo Spoldi, 140, New York, pounded out a close eight-round decision over Ernie (Cat) Robinson, 146, Jamaica, N. Y., tonight at St. Nicholas Arena.

The Long Island Negro drew even with Spoldi in the seventh round only to lose through Spoldi's aggressiveness in the final session.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 4.—Brooklyn, where baseball lies closest to the heart of the people, appropriately opens the national pastime's war charity phase this Friday at Ebbetts Field.

The Dodgers, fresh, we hope, from their grueling trip through the West, will take on the Giants in the first test of big league twilight baseball. The battle between the age-old rivals will begin at 4:45 E. W. T. Every person must pay for the right to see the game, play in it, write about it, take the tickets, sweep up the debris, serve the hot dogs or call the balls and strikes.

CONSIDINE

Larry MacPhail, the first of the baseball men to start beefing that the game should do something for war charities, hopes to turn $75,000 to the Navy Relief Society. He will, too, unless all signs fail. For this is a first-class contest and, if that won't fill Ebbetts Field, then the thought of the worthy charity, the pregame ceremonies (including a parade) and the novelty of twilight ball certainly will.

It will be the first of a home-and-home series with the Giants, the second to be played at the Polo Grounds in August for Army Emergency Relief. And it will pace the charity games being planned by the Yankees, Nationals, Cards, etc.

We trust it will stir the liver of those clubs, major and minor, which have rather foolishly failed to get on the bandwagon. Baseball men all over the land should offer up a prayer of gratitude each night for blessings received. From President Roosevelt down, officials have plugged for the continuation of the game in face of blunt facts that it is played by able-bodied, draft-aged men and played with rationed equipment.

Best part of the Dodgers-Giants games will be that the charities concerned are not the selling points of the contests. Sweet charity has been asked to pick up and carry some awful loads of sports junk in her harried day. Sports fights for charity are inclined to be contests that otherwise wouldn't emerge from the agate type of a sports page. "Days" for this or that spavined ball player often see the home team playing a visiting club that ordinarily couldn't draw flies if the athletes played in a thin veneer of molasses.

But nobody ever had to apologize for a game between the Dodgers and the Giants, and nobody ever will. It is an endearing and enduring rivalry that reaches far back into the fragrant sports history of the biggest city of them all. It will, we think, set a stirring example for other clubs to follow. It isn't unlikely that baseball will raise a couple of million dolars, now that the die is about to be cast with a flourish.

If you think you're being abused because you are forced, for one reason or another, to walk more these days, get a load of Jim Hocking, the man who never once during his 85 years has been nicknamed "Hitch." With the help of Ray Van Cleef, the Hotel New Yorker's rubdowner par excellence, we have some of Hocking's feats at hand.

Hocking has walked a quarter of a million miles, without replacements. When he was a sprightly lad of 61, he walked from Times Square to the City Hall in Philadelphia, 97 miles, in 19 hours and 16 minutes. Seven years later he strolled from New York to Chicago in 17 days, 11 hours. It took him only 83 walking days the time he ankled from Coney Island to San Francisco. Sergt. John Walsh, when 61, did the same 3684 miles in 85 days, didn't like San Francisco, did an about-face, and walked back. Made nice time coming back: 91 days. Jim Ennis is another who contracted the same curious siege of vagabondia at Coney Island and immediately lit out for San Francisco.

Last year, at the age of 84, Hocking walked from Yonkers to Poughkeepsie, 61 miles, in 13 hours and 40 minutes. On his 84th birthday he legged it from old Teaneck, N. J., his home when not walking, and made it to Bear Mountain (N. Y.) Inn, 55 miles away, in 12 hours. Edward Payson Weston, at 75, walked from Minneapolis to New York, 1546 miles, in 60 days.

So what are you griping about?

'Haymaker' After Derby Draws $100 Fine for Haas

By International News Service

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—Leon (Buddy) Haas, who rode Requested nowhere in the Kentucky Derby, tonight was fined $100 by Churchill Downs stewards for aiming a 'jockey room haymaker at Basil James, who rode Alsab to second place.

Both jockeys had already left for Eastern tracks, so neither was heard, but Steward Sam H. McMeekin explained after hearing the valets that:

"It seems that Haas came in excited and swung at James—who was seated and having his boots pulled off by a valet—just after the Derby.

"The blow never landed and somebody separated the boys. Haas and James seem to have patched things up, for they reportedly left the track friends."

Newsmen had stated that, before taking the swing, Haas said something about being "crowded," but neither Haas nor James would discuss the incident later. Today's hearing of the valets did not turn up anything new on the subject.

Pimlico track, where Haas is riding, will be asked to collect the fine.

Greeks Beaten

Vass' Birdie Earns Deadlock for G.W. With V.P.I. Golfers

George O. Vass, jr., birdied the eighteenth hole of his home Kenwood course yesterday to enable the George Washington University golfers to tie V. P. I., 3-3. It was the second tie match of the season for the Colonials. Vass had 73 for the round.

Vass' birdie three defeated Capt. Irwin of the visitors, 1 up, and helped Vass and Charles Stockell halve the best ball point. Stockell and Swain of the visitors finished all even.

In the second foursome Scott Gudmundson, G. W. gridder, defeated Livingston of V. P. I., 1 up, but Jim Raush, a courtman, lost to Pattersall, 6 and 5, and G. L. lost the best ball point, 5 and 4.

George Washington's match with Georgetown today at Bannockburn has been canceled as the G. W. golfers had conflicting classes but the Colonials will play Catholic U. Friday at Kenwood in a match not previously announced.

Newcomer Booked On Mat Program

Promoter Joe Turner is bringing in another newcomer to show his wrestling wares on Thursday night's card at Riverside Stadium.

With Joe Cox, the growling Kansasian, meeting Tommy O'Toole, the Irish favorite, in the feature bout, Turner has signed up Rudy La Ditzi of Chicago to meet Milo Steinborn, the Memphis "Strong Man," in a special 30-minute match.

La Ditzi is a strapping six-footer, weighing 220 pounds.

A two-man team match will be on the card. It finds Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman facing Henry Kulkovich and Dick Lever.

Pat Fraley will meet Lee Hening, another new face from Iowa.

Cubs Beat Great Lakes Nine, 6-3, Second Time Since 1918

By the Associated Press

Great Lakes, Ill., May 4.—The Chicago Cubs defeated the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, 6-3, today after loaning the Bluejackets a pitcher.

It was the third straight loss of Lieut. Mickey Cochrane's sailors in four starts and the first time the club has faced a major league outfit this season. The last meeting of the Cubs and Great Lake was in 1918. The Bruins won, 5-0.

A Cub rookie, Les Fleming, took over with the bases loaded and none out in the first inning, replacing Al Barkus, an apprentice seaman from Superior, Wis., who had walked three and given a hit.

Winning pitcher Ed Hanyzewski also got off to a rocky start, walking three men to force in a run in the first and being tapped for three hits and two runs in the second as Fleming singled, Baumholtz doubled and Grace singled. The Cubs rushed across two tallies in the ninth to clinch the game.

Upwards of 8000 officers and men, including Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, saw the game.

Ocean Blue Ties Record Winning Jennings 'Cap at Pimlico

Doublrab Is Second In 6-Furlong Test; Transfigure Third In $5000 Fixture

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., May 4.—Ocean Blue, a picture horse owned by Crispin Oglebay of Cleveland, equalled the track record for six furlongs here this afternoon and won the fifteenth running of the $5000 added Jennings Handicap in the bargain. The big 4-year-old son of Blue Larkspur held the lead every step of the way and was clocked by the electric teletimer in 1:10 4-5, a time that has stood here for many years and registered by two horses, Mainmast and Con Amore.

Ocean Blue won by a length and a half from Mrs. T. Christopher's Doublrab. A neck away from second money came the favorite, John L. Sullivan's Tranfigure, to be third. Four others contested in the speed test which has drawn ace sprinters for years. Battle Jack, who finished fifth today and Handy Tom shared the previous mark for the race of 1:11 2-5.

Ocean Blue Pays $23.70

It was the first start of the year for Ocean Blue, who has been conditioned over this track. The crowd of 8000 probably had heard of Ocean Blue's workouts, but the customers doubted that he could match strides with the star company without having a race under his belt. The winner paid $23.70.

Jockey Tommy Malley, the veteran who drove Vagrancy to victory in last Saturday's Pimlico Oaks, had the mount on Ocean Blue. The gelding broke from the outside gate and was in front at once. A. J. Sackett's Richmond, shipped down from New York for this race, tried to keep up on the inside. Battle Jack was in good position, as was Madigama as the field went toward the far turn.

Ocean Blue, taken over toward the inside rail to save ground, had a length advantage leaving the backstretch and made it two lengths a moment later when Richmond began to falter. Doublrab then slipped through on the inside and appeared to be a serious factor. The gray colt, however, could not gain on Ocean Blue in the straightaway. Transfigure,outrun early, rallied and closed boldly, but his effort was too late even to catch Doublrab.

OCEAN BLUE, first to show in front, was taken in to save ground while setting pace, drew clear approaching stretch and held sway thereafter under hand drive. DOUBLRAB could not keep up early, found racing room on inside, moved up menacingly, but hung in final test. TRANSFIGURE was rated early, rallied when placed to drive and closed willingly. RICHMOND was forward contender on inside to stretch and weakened.

Poet Laureate Romps Home at 6-5

By the Associated Press

Churchill Downs, May 4.—The Rosedale Stable of George Clarke scored its first success of the meeting with its very first entry as Poet Laureate, a 6 to 5 favorite in the betting, won a popular victory in the Oak Ridge Farm Purse, feature of today's off-day program.

Following the early pace set by R. C. Stable's Radio Crusade, an outsider, to the head of the stretch, the son of Bostonian came on to win as Jockey J. Adams pleased by two lengths. Radio Crusade, although tiring, had enough left to stall off A. N. Gelb's Mericano, another longshot, by a length for the place.

Poet Laureate always was a staunch public choice, his final $2 mutuel price being $5. His time for the seven furlongs over the field of seven others was 1:27.5

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Just after the running of the Derby, a young writer for a Kentucky paper tapped out this line: "I'd rather be WRIGHT than President." Coming back on the train, the boys in the club car were comparing experiences and one said, "I didn't mind when they raised the hotel rates in Louisville to a dollar an hour. I could stand for paying a double taxi rate and it was O. K. when they upped the buck dinner to a buck and a half, but when they changed those pinball machines and made it 42,000 for two free games instead of 36,000—brother that was murder in the first degree." The running of the Derby proved that six mint puleps, three Scotch and sodas, one Zombie and three ryes equal one hangover. As far as determining a coming 3-year-old champion, it was a bust. Shut Out may make us eat a lot of words but the speed steeds move to Baltimore for the Preakness with the question mark still displayed. Trainer Ben Jones, who sat out last Saturday's race when he scratched the Calumet Farm's Sun Again, was on the train. He said that he believed the best horse won and that Alsab was the second best horse. Jones was impressed by Alsab and predicts that the son of Good Goods will be the one to beat in the Preakness and the Belmont. He said Devil Diver disappointed him after those good workouts. The man who saddled Whirlaway last year blamed a cuppy track for the fact that speed horses, of the Apache and Requested type, failed to show anything. Tomorrow's Dixie Handicap should prove a brilliant race, chiefly because it involves a meeting of Whirlaway, Challedon and Mioland. These three horses have won nearly a million dollars. Whirlaway is third on the all-time list with $352,536. Challedon is fifth with $332,860 and Mioland is eighteenth with $235,815. Some of the others slated to go are: Best Seller, Pictor, Warlock, Attention, Century Note, Sir Alfred, Fillisteo, Staretor, Air Master, Impound and Fairmond. The Charles Town books are out. The West Virginia track will have nine races on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. See you on the rail, here and there. BILL.

First race—LIBERTY POLLY has the speed of this maiden field and should graduate. Gets the No. 1 position. PRETTY IS is a fair sort and may be close. LANCELEAF has a fair race as a recommendation.

Second race—FLYING REIGH looks like the class of this field of Maryland breds. Needs only the right handling. THE KILLER was in the money last out and may improve enough to be a factor with these. SWEEPING LEE for the minor money.

Third race—DUNDRILLIN won last week and should turn back this field of timber toppers. MEETING HOUSE is an entry mate of Dundrillin and they may run one, two. JACKET belongs in the money circle.

Fourth race—Here's another entry that may take first and second money. The Gustave Ring pair of HASTEVILLE and RINGMENOW will be tough to whip. Both are at tops. MAEJAMES to take the show end.

Fifth race—POMPION, despite 117 pounds, should open a good lead early on this field and probably will last. ABRASION likes the track and will be in the first flight. JAY JAY to account for the minor money.

Sixth race—ANTICLIMAX had a rough trip last out and with clear sailing this one may take it all at good odds. TRELAWNY and INCOMING will be closing ground at the end.

Seventh race—HIGH ARCH will like a mile and a half and is ready for the best. EXPLORATION and RAHANEE are good over a long route and may take the place and show.

Eighth race—SAY JUDGE is another who should be at home over the marathon distance. I like him despite 120 pounds. BATTLE WON and HELEN'S LAD to fill out the cash bracket.

Best bet—High Arch.

Al Simmons Is Chased By Umpire

Bloodworth Hits Homer Off Besse; Newhouser Saves Game, Sacks Full

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 4.—Al Simmons was banished from the coaching lines and a fan, returnng a foul ball hit into the stands, aimed it at Umpire Art Passarella as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Philadelphia Athletics today, 6-4.

The rumpus started when Simmons disputed the umpire's ruling that a grounder hit by the A's Pete Suder was a fair ball.

The A's filled the bases in the ninth but were unable to erase the 6-4 deficit as Hall Newhauser relieved Rookie Virgil Fuchs. The latter was credited with his third victory although he yielded nine hits, including home runs by Bob Johnson and Jack Wallaesa.

Jimmy Bloodworth's home run paced Detroit's 12-hit attack. Eleven of the safeties and all the Tiger runs were made off Herman Besse.

Kansas U. Bows To 'Cat Trackmen

Lawrence, Kans., May 4 (AP).—Sweeping the quarter-mile and the 220-yard dash, the Kansas State College Wildcats scored an 81-to-50 victory today over the Kansas Jayhawks in a Big Six dual track meet that was postponed from Saturday.

One meet record was broken by Milo Farneti, of Kansas, who threw the javelin 198 feet 3⅝ inches to better the old mark of 193 feet set by Fen Durand, Kansas, in 1937.

Before the 220 was run Kansas was leading, 38 to 34, but the Wildcats swept the furlong and picked up six points in the discus to take the lead which they held from then on.

De Chard Threatened By Baksi Tonight

Local Heavy in Feature of Fight Show At Riverside; Kenner Sees Action

By Tony Neri

For the first time in his young career, Jimmy DeChard, Washington's only worthwhile heavyweight, will find himself on the long end of the odds tonight when he meets Joe Baksi, reputed boxing star of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., at Riverside Stadium in the feature 8-round match of Promoter Joe Turner's second boxing venture at the Potomac arena.

DeChard, recent winner over Joe O'Gatti, will be seeking his seventh straight pro victory and it wouldn't surprise if that winning streak was halted by Baksi, who is rapidly advancing as athreat in the heavyweight division.

Two other eight-rounders are scheduled in which Jabbo Kenner, local colored heavyweight, faces Joe Carilli of Hartford Conn., and Oscar Wright, another local colored boy, engages Joey Zodda, New York lightweight. A six will pair Gus Mirman, former Columbus University lightheavy with Eddie Alexander, of New York. A four-rounder will complete the card.

Baksi comes here with a record of 22 wins in 23 fights, having lost only to Teddy Wint. Baksi recently fought Al Hart on the Joe Louis-Abe Simon card in the Garden and the fight was no less than sensational. He was knocked down three times only to come back and give Hart a thorough going over. With the Garden crowd voicing its approval at the terrific action, Baksi went on to gain a well-earned draw.

Jim Weighs 193

DeChard will be outweighed by approximately 17 pounds. Manager Frankie Mann expects Jimmy to enter the ring around 193. Although DeChard is in a tough spot tonight, Mann isn't worried over the outcome. He says Jimmy will be in better shape tonight than in his first against O'Gatti, which was Jimmy's first after a five-month lay-off.

Mann said, "Jimmy's in there with a tough fighter and he figures to have a lot of trouble, but I think he'll take it. I know Jimmy didn't look so good against O'Gatti, but it was his first fight after being hurt in the Jay Turner fight some time ago. He's been training every day at the Apollo with Tony Jim Jam and I know he's in shape. This fellow Baksi holds a win over Frank Poreda, who Jimmy fights on the Navy card, and we'll see how he stands up. I think he'll win."

In those other two fights tonight the local boys Kenner and Wright are seeing action for the first time since their losing efforts about seven weeks ago. Kenner was kayoed by Al Blake in four rounds and Wright was decisioned by Billy Murray. Mirman, the local product, has won four straight fights, three being knockouts.

The "buy a serviceman a ticket fund," which was started when an anonymous party donated $200 for the purchase of tickets to the Navy relief boxing show May 21 at Griffith Stadium and asked that the tickets be distributed at nearby service camps, has $215 so far and it is believed more donations will be forthcoming with the announcement that tickets will go on sale today at the ball park.

The writer will act as treasurer for the fund and will purchase the tickets and distribute them to soldiers, sailors and marines. If any reader desires to lend a helping hand, donations may be sent in care of The Post's Boxing Writer, Sports Department. The boys in uniform will be mighty happy to see that Navy boxing card. The show features Lou Nova and Lee Savold in the main event of 10 rounds. Steve Mamakos fights Georgie Abrams in another 10-rounder. The card will also have Maynard Daniels, Frankie Wills and Jimmy DeChard, all local talent.

Five Michigan Golfers Led By Al Watrous

Detroit, May 4 (AP).—Five Michigan golfers, topped by the Veteran Al Watrous of Detroit, earned starting places today in the twenty-fifth National P. G. A. championship at Atlantic City May 25. Watrous fired a 75-73—148, four over par, for the 36-hole sectional trial played in a cold biting wind.

Two other Detroiters, Joe Belfore and Bill Graham, made the grade along with Denny Champagne of Grand Rapids and Lee Kosten of Muskegon. Champagne had 151 and the others 152. Only 11 pros, smallest field in history here, sought to qualify.

Newton, Mass.

Newton, Mass., May 4 (U.P.).—Ben Loving of Longmeadow shot a two under par 140 on the Woodland Golf Club course today to lead a field of 30 in the 36-hole New England sectional test for eight qualifying berths in the Professional Golfers Association tournament at Absecon, N. J., May 25.

The seven other qualifiers were Tom Mahan of the United Shoe Club, Beverly, 142; Henry Bontempo, Franconia, N. H., 145; Nick Gianferante, Pittsfield, 147; Jack Harvey, Keene, N. H., 148; Elmer Reed, Nashua, N. H., 148; Charles MacAndrews, Burlington, Vt., 150; and Jerry Gianferante, Sagamore Springs, 151.

Columbus, Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, May 4 (AP).—Tony Penna of Dayton shot 142 today to lead the field in the 36-hole Ohio sectional qualifier for the National Professional Golfers Association Tournament. He had a two under par first round, 70, and a 72.

Five others who qualified were Herman Keiser of Akron, 71-73—144; Bob Munday of Toledo, 75, 77—152; Bob Gutwein of Cincinnati, 78, 75—153; William Barbour of Brecksville, 75, 79—154, and Verl Stinchcomb of Ashtabula, 80, 75—155.

Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, May 4 (AP).—William A. (Red) Francis of Hollidaysburg, Pa., stroked out a 36-hole total of 72, 73—145 today, one over par, to lead the four district qualifiers for the National Professional Golfers Association championship.

The others qualifying were Sam Parks, jr., of Pittsburgh, a former National Open champion, 72, 74—146; Dick Shoemaker, Pittsburgh, 74, 73—147, and Monty Onoretta, Pittsburgh, 77, 70—147.

Ball, Coffey Harper Win P.G.A. Berths

He was booming tee shots down the middle, hitting crisp iron shots with plenty of bite on the greens and putting well. He nearly had a 2 on the par 5 second hole, hitting a brassie second shot which carried into the cup but bounded out just inches away.

The par five holes were all playing short yesterday and Coffey took advantage of it. Both times on the ninth he rapped four wood second shots within 8 feet of the cup and holed the putts for eagle threes while he birdied the par five tenth twice, the par five sixteenth twice and the second once. Altogether he had seven birdies and two eagles and went ove. par a few times when he over or under clubbed.

Worsham made a great bid for a berth after apparently tossing away his chances with shoddy iron play midway on the last nine. He knew he was two strokes back of the last place on the thirty-fourth tee and he birdied that hole, knocked a putt home from 40 feet on the thirty-fifth for another birdie and, with the pressure on, standing on the home green, curled a 2-footer inti the cup after nubbing an approach shot.

Harper, Gibson and Cox played together and scored alike. They were even playing the last hole and Harper hit a skied hook off the tee, but he played a fine long iron just short of the green, chipped within 3 feet and holed the putt. Cox played the hole in regulation fashion, but Gibson missed his chance on the home carpet. Andy played two beautiful shots to be putting from a birdie from 8 feet, but his try skipped to the left of the cup and left him in the playoff.

Irked at Own Play

Harper was thoroughly disgusted with his day's play, but the Portsmouth pro, who jumped among the Nation's leading playing pros with his winnings on the winter tour, still managed to post a sub-par count for the 45 holes. His wedge saved him time after time with approach shots within a foot or two of the cup. Harper led the Middle Atlantic qualifying last year in Richmond.

Cox breezed around the double-round route in one better than regulation figures with only fair luck on the putting greens. Wiffy was driving well and hitting short irons well but on the long irons and on the greens he lost a good many strokes. He made only two or three putts of any distance.

The boys were birdie conscious. Gibson had nine birdies; Worsham, eight; Harper and Cox, seven each . . . Ball is taking an aviation course at Charlottesville and is also attending the University of Virginia to brush up for his coming examination . . . Bob Barnett played the first nine holes with only 10 putts, and then took 19 on the second nine . . . The eighteenth hole was costly to Gibson. In the morning a seven-foot putt hung on the lip of the cup and in the afternoon he missed one of the same distance . . . The storm caught the boys on the early holes in the afternoon but it was brief and apparently had little affect on the scoring . . . Winter rules had some bearing on the low scoring . . . Worsham hit three traps in four holes during his back nine slump in the p. m. . . . Ball and Coffey divided the sweepstakes for the two low men.

Kligman Pitches, Bats Eagles To 8-7 Victory Over Cards

Drives Home Winning Run in 9th With Sharp Single as A. U. Beats Mason-Dixon Rivals

Charley Kligman, gangling moundsman of American University, was the winning hitter as well as the winning pitcher yesterday as the Eagles downed their intracity and Mason-Dixon Conference rival, Catholic U., 87, on the A. U. diamond.

There were runners on first and second in the bottom half of the ninth when Kligman came to the plate. His sharp single chased Outfielder Hertz home from second, giving American its fifth triumph in 15 starts.

The blow effectively voided the best hit of the day. That was Centerfielder Norris' home run in the top half of the ninth, tying the count after the Cards had trailed for eight innings.

Hits were fairly evenly distributed between the teams as American used Herman Byer in addition to Kligman on the mound and the Cardinals sent Baltrikonis and Ksycewski in to stop the hosts. Mixed in the winners' 13 safeties were a pair of doubles and a pair of triples, while C. U. had a double play by O'Brien in addition to Norris, homer.

To the latter went slugging honors with three hits in four times at bat. He was effective as the Cards put on a four-run uprising that came within one run of tying in the fifth, and even more so in the ninth.

Things Are Different Down There in Australia

Paramount's Harry Hunter Tells About It; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT WAS AN ILLUMINATING, clarifying and humorous talk that Harry Hunter, managing director of Paramount interests in Australia, delivered at the Variety Club luncheon in his honor yesterday.

RAYMOND MASSEY

Having traced briefly the hazards of the three-week trip from Down Under to his native country, Mr. Hunter confessed at once that he sensed a tremendous contrast in national outlook between the two continents. "In Australia," he said, "the whole country is 'in the war.' Nightly blackouts in Sydney, a city of 1,500,000, are rigidly enforced. Every office building must have an air-raid shelter for every 50 occupants. Plate glass must be double screened or removed. For a seven-passenger car, licensed for both business and pleasure driving, I enjoyed an opulent allotment of 11 gallons of petrol a month; those licensed only for pleasure must do their touring on three or four gallons. The supreme consciousness of the people is that the homeland must be defended against invasion and the war won. My observation since arriving home is that in this country the profit motif sounds the dominant note, from labor's eagerness for the highest wages to the manufacturers' aim to maneuver the widest margin between sales price and cost of production. In spirit America is not yet in 'the war.'"

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, he observed, was as much a hero to the Australians, for his magnificent work on Bataan, as to his fellow countrymen. They clamored for his presence in Australia long before the order sending him there was issued. After outlining the tremendous difficulties of topography, geographical location, transportation and the like, Mr. Hunter expressed the conviction that if anyone can hold the antipodean continent, MacArthur is the man. He feels that it has been by-passed only temporarily by the Japs.

Upon assuming his duties in Australia five-and-a-half years ago, Harry had a great deal to forget and a lot to learn about the conduct of the picture business in a land where all of our usual practices are reversed. Film programs, for example, are not booked by the exhibitor, but by the distributor—which he looked upon as a welcome emancipation from many headaches. "The producing company knows infinitely more about its product than any exhibitor possibly could!" The cheapest seats in the theaters are the orchestra chairs; the most expensive, the balcony, which are uniformly reserved. Instead of expecting their theaters to be comfortably heated, the patrons prefer to sit in a temperature in the middle 50's with their overcoats and wraps on. "If we hold our coats, how will the other customers get past us to their seats?" Whereupon, Mr. Hunter decided to save the extra coal bill and let his public be comfortable! Admission prices are higher in Australia than in the United States, ranging, in the neighborhood houses, from 20 cents to 80 and, in the midcity areas, from 50 cents to $1.20. No picture runs less than a week. "Gone With the Wind" had a first run of 90 weeks! The recital could go on indefinitely, but that will give you a rough idea.

The Melancholy Dane in Triplicate

It is interesting to note that three celebrated Hamlets of our generation are starred in "The Invaders," the adventurous story of a Nazi submarine crew's attempted invasion of Canada, following the current "Kings Row" on the screen at the Earle Theater.

The first Melancholy Dane of the three was Raymond Massey. A little more than 10 years ago, before the word "streamlined" was applied to everything from a skyscraper to a muffin, the Canadian actor made his first impression upon Broadway in a "streamlined" version of "Hamlet," paced rather to the violences of melodrama than to contemplation.

At the opposite swing of the pendulum was the "uncut" version of the Shakespearean tragedy, presented by Laurence Olivier at the Old Vic, in London, in 1937.

A little later, Leslie Howard brought a glowing production of "Hamlet" to Broadway, in which he substituted Tenth Century Danish constumes and decorations for the habitual Elizabethan settings.

Grapevine reports are to the effect that the Hollywood Victory Caravan covered itself with glory in both Boston and Philadelphia, the two one-night stands immediately following the Washington premiere at the Capitol Thursday night. No word as yet from last night's performance at the Coliseum, in Detroit.

My-Regards-to-the-Sweet-Tooth Note

Hope all you other "A" to "E's" got to school on time yesterday to register for the one-spoonful-per-cup!

Back to the Grind!

Hollywood, Calif., May 4.—The nicest part of any vacation is coming home, and after three hectic weeks of New York, Washington, Long Island and Connecticut, the riot of roses on my back fence was the prettiest thing I ever saw . . . Of course, I flew. So many new regulations have been put through that plane home was filled with ferry pilots—busiest boys in America today. No sleepers for them—they sat up all night. They had to be in the air next morning delivering more planes. One boy, who looked all of 19, confessed he had a 3-day-old daughter he hadn't seen.

HEDDA HOPPER

When we went through a fog bank, one of the boys got out his instruments and figured out what was happening—plane was flying on instruments—gave himself a lesson, and then checked it with the pilot. Seems ferry pilots skirt big storms—don't go through 'em.

There's been a lot written about New York being a boom town, people spending money like water. It's true, yet isn't. People who've never had much money, but are now working in munitions factories, getting overtime, and making more than they ever thought possible, save up for a New York holiday. They pack the hotels west of Sixth Avenue, theaters and night clubs. Every Saturday night looks like New Year's Eve. And while pictures get better, plays are getting poorer.

The best show in town is the Theater Wing Stage Door canteen, which provides the finest entertainment to be seen in New York.

You can see Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne serving the boys and washing dishes, Kit Cornell over in a corner talking, John Charles Thomas, Danny Kaye, Gertie Lawrence, and persons like that all serving and entertaining same night. Place is so crowded boys can't applaud, so they cheer.

Washington is the real madhouse—like Hollywood in our boom days, when real estate prices were pyramiding daily. Even the polo field has been converted into a parking space.

Had a marvelous chat with the President, and while he looks a little more tired than he did a year ago, he's in fine shape, and I think, even with the gravity of our situation, gets a terrific kick out of his job.

Caught sight of the coat-tail of Joe Kennedy, but he disappeared before I could ask him if he was going to head the shipbuilding program. Dined several times with Bernard M. Baruch. Now even men like Donald Nelson aren't afraid to seek his advice, and tell openly that they're taking it.

Met Mrs. Ella Stone, who wrote "Escape," and asked how she liked the picture. She said she thinks Norma Shearer's charming, but she would have preferred someone of the age and experience of Ruth Chatterton. She's busy writing a detective story with a war background.

My sponsor, bless him, called my trip a vacation. Quaint sense of humor!

featured in the principal male role, opposite Jane Cowl, in Guthrie McClintic's production of the new George Batson comedy, "Punch and Julia," presented last night for the first time on any stage in the National Theater. Mr. Margetson was last seen here with Cornelia Otis Skinner in "Theater," on the same stage

'Punch and Julia,' at National, Is a Gossamer Bit of Froth

By Nelson B. Bell

"PUNCH AND JULIA." Guthrie McClintic presents the new comedy in three acts and four scenes, by George Batson. Staged by Guthrie McClintic; setting by Donald Oenslager. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Eva ..... Viola Roache
Molly Kane ..... Janet Fox
Phil Powell ..... Arthur Margetson
Sherry Downing ..... Frances Heflin
Julia ..... Jane Cowl
Leo ..... Gregory Peck

The punch in "Punch and Julia" is delivered with a powder puff.

The new comedy, in three acts and four scenes, by George Batson, presented last night by Guthrie McClintic for the first time on any stage in the National Theater, with Jane Cowl as star, is a feathery, inconsequential bit of elderdown that flutters about the fringes of "social significance," but never rises above the shallow flippancy of romantic farce.

It is at times gay and sparkling and breezily amusing. Again it is slow, stolid and strained. Occasionally it becomes a shade daring in its boudoir insouciance and the innocent double entendre that springs from colloquies in which neither of the participants comprehends at all what it is the other is saying. Neither one means the other. It makes a difference. The final account casts up to a slight balance in favor of the gossamer whimsy as a bit of frivolous filigree with which any midspring season always can do by way of lacy decoration.

It all comes about when an imminent divorce seems to precipitate a crisis in the lives of the great newspaper tycoon and his book-columnist and sponsored radio commentator after 10 years of rather more than platonic friendship and fabulously profitable professional association. The fortyish Phil Powell perceives in marriage to Julia the ideal consummation of his middle years. To Julia it appeals only as a potential threat to the comfortable, penthouse companionship they have enjoyed for so long. Their problem is resolved through the sudden projection into their lives of one Leo Christy, whose flaming book against the evils of the capitalistic system Julia has bitterly assailed in her columns and broadcasts. Through the roar of his tirade she hears the gentler voice of idealistic youth reforming the world.

A Fine Confusion of Emotions

From the mutually helpful exploration of each other's character, there evolves an exquisite confusion of maternal instinct, youthful gratitude and misdirected love that is only clarified when the indigent revolutionary is awakened through irresistible feminine wiles to a realization that he has fallen hopelessly in love with the ingenuous heiress to ten million dollars, the niece of the chief object of his communistic scorn and contumely. For all of Julia's conversion to Leo's crusading spirit, and Phil's adamant conviction that the world is as it was when Hoover was in the White House, there is nothing left to them but a reconciliation of their antagonisms and a leisurely stroll down the path of true—well, almost—love.

This framework of adventurous romance, of course, has been embellished with brittle fripperies not too heavy for its fragile structure. Characters that are not too convincing, at best, have been made agreeable by the personal graces, artifices and sprightly humor of those chosen to lend them charm of one sort or another.

Miss Cowl, as always, was buoyant, dazzling and delightful last evening, as the brilliant victim of a tangle of mistaken impulses, a warmly sympathetic nature and a slight misapprehension of what was going on about her. Not too steady in her lines on occasion, she still offered a complete explanation of the ardency of the menfolk about her. Arthur Margetson, by an odd coincidence cast in a role and a play strangely reminiscent in form and treatment of Maugham's "Theater," in which he was last seen in Washington, fortified the impression of a year ago that he is an actor of great finesse and polish, admirably equipped to magnify the merit of any light romantic comedy in which he may be cast. His performance in every respect matched the scintillant quality of the star's.

Miss Heflin Wins an Orchid

Among the subordinate players—but not too subordinate—Frances Heflin, younger sister of the more celebrated Van, of both stage and screen renown, established herself at once as the most captivating ingenue of the National's current season. Pert, blonde and wholly natural, Miss Heflin eloquently justified young Mr. Christy's abandonment of all the social and economic precepts with which he had deluded himself throughout his life. Gregory Peck, as Christy, seemed a little at a loss as how best to approximate the high proficiency of the bewitching ladies with whom he fell in love. The infallible Viola Roache offered another of her perfectly limned housemaids, in the knowing role of Eva, and Janet Fox undoubtedly would have taken rank with the rest had she been audible as far back as the fourth row of the orchestra.

Donald Oenslager's single setting of Julia's penthouse study is a helpful adjunct to an innocuous bit of diversion that will be improved by a quickening of its early pace. It is not sufficiently substantial at present to carry itself by its own momentum.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 4.

Lord Beaverbrook's greatest pride is in the flying career of his son, Max Aitken. He was especially proud when the cables reported that young Aitken had shot down a Nazi Dornier . . . Last week, when Beaverbrook delivered his address before the newspaper publishers and advertisers at the Waldorf, the program-listing committee asked him what title he wanted them to print after his name. "Oh, no title at all," Beaverbrook shrugged . . . "But we must use a descriptive," the committee insisted . . . "If you really must," said Beaverbrook, "then after my name just print 'Father of Max Aitken.'"

SPENCER TRACY

Spencer Tracy, who co-starred with Katharine Hepburn in "Woman of the Year," may return to Broadway in the Phil Barry play with which Miss Hepburn now is touring . . . General Motors is making a 50-minute movie, to be used for morale purposes, and in which Bette Davis and Charles Boyer may appear. Its title is "How to Lose a War." The author is Hans Habe, who was a soldier in the French Army, and who wrote the best seller, "Thousands Shall Fall" . . . Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne have agreed to appear next in the new play just completed by Sam Behrman . . . Tuesday the famous painting "Victory"—which brought $160,000 for War Relief during the last war—will be sold again for Army and Navy Relief at the Treasury Building.

Marc Blitzstein, who wrote the new movie, "Native Land," received an urgent call from the producers—after Paul Robeson had made the commentary for the film. "Can you play the piano?" Blitzstein was asked . . . "Yes," replied the twice-winner of the Guggenheim Award . . . "How well?" the producer continued . . . "I played twice with the Philadelphia, Orchestra," Marc related. "I played the piano for the entire run of my show, 'The Cradle Will Rock.' I was the first American student of Siloti who taught Rachmaninoff" . . . "Okay, you'll do," said the producer, giving him a toy-piano which children use. "Art Smith played a tune on this in the picture, but he can't remember what it was he played. So we'll dub in a sound track of your playing."

Tony Galento's manager has been spurning $500-a-week offers for Tony to work in night clubs and introduce his first composition, "The Mender of Broken Guitars." Tony, however, is singing that song, without pay, in a nondescript saloon operated by a friend . . . Margie Hart, the strip-teaser, will join the Joe E. Lewis-Bert Lahr vaudeville troupe in Chicago. Frank Fay and Bert Wheeler will head the Los Angeles vandeville troupe. Both shows are being booked by ex-vaudevillian Paul Small . . . Jean Sablon read last week that he had been signed to appear at the Copacabana. Next night Sablon, accompanied by Germaine Aussey, went to the Copacabana, sat there for two hours and left—without a sign or word of recognition from the management.

Three years ago Kay Halle, C. B. S. commentator for the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, worked on a Toscanini broadcast. When the maestro expressed appreciation, Miss Halle asked him for the shirt he was wearing, together with an autograph. But Toscanini left the city before she could collect both prized items . . . Last Wednesday Miss Halle met Toscanini again, after his Carnegie Hall concert. She reminded him of the Cleveland episode. "Taxes are heavy, but I still have another shirt to my back," said the maestro. He autographed the shirt he was wearing and presented it to her.

Louis Fischer, author of "Dawn of Victory," will lecture about the background of the war, in Atlanta this week. On the same program will be Ilka Chase, author of "Past Imperfect." Fischer's lecture will be titled "Very Imperfect Past" . . . Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose" will resume its broadcast series in September, after a summer layoff. Miss Nichols is resolved to make it run as long in radio as it did on Broadway . . . The other night, when the featured singer at Radio Franks cafe failed to appear, Dean Dickinson, the palmist there, substituted . . . Some Dutch sailors, at the Castleholm, told of the Amsterdam clocks which suddenly began stopping at 5 minutes to 1. The Nazis recognized that this formed a "V," and punished the community. Amsterdam's clocks now are fixed to stop at a quarter to 3, while the defiant citizens announce: "It's now a quarter to 3, but soon it will be 5 minutes to 1.'

Tallulah Bankhead will broadcast a radio version of "Road to Jericho," written many years ago by Elmer Davis. Due notice of this was given to the N. B. C. press officials, who were to make the announcement . . . "Elmer Davis now is a commentator for C. B. C," the publicists protested. But the broadcast will proceed as scheduled. That's why the N. B. C. publicity release for program-listing describes "Road to Jericho" as having been written by "E. Davis."

Bank Inquiry Noted for New Federal Issue

Washington financial quarters reported yesterday the new Government 2 per cent bonds of 1949-51 were attracting considerable inquiry from commercial banks, while interest in the 2½ per cent Treasuries of 1962-67 seemed confined for the prsent to institutional investors such as insurance companies.

A total of $1,250,000,000 in the new 2 per cent bonds will be issued, while the other issue not available to commercial banks, will be of an unspecified amount and will not be transferable for the first 60 days after May 5, the date of issue.

Bond traders expected subscriptions for the 2s to close last night, while the longer term 2½s would be available probably for two weeks.

A campaign for sale of the 2½s was under way all over the Nation.

"This is a direct assignment to our industry by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and we plan to organize our maximum efforts," Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, told securities dealers here and elsewhre.

2% U. S. Issue Oversubscribed

Banks and other large investors yesterday quickly oversubscribed an issue of $1,250,000,000 of 2 per cent Treasury bonds, maturing in seven to nine years.

Subscription books on this issue closed at midnight.

Credit Men to Meet

Washington retail credit men will attend a three-day convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, opening tomorrow in Cincinnati. Principal discussion will revolve about expected regulations of the Federal Reserve Board restricting charge accounts.

Among those from Washington attending the parley will be E. Emerson Snyder of Raleigh Haberdasher and president of the Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington, Francis Dammen of Goldenberg's, Roscoe Reichard of the Hecht Co., Jennings Snider of Garfinckel's, Frank Scott of Wodward & Lothrop, and John K. Althaus of the Washington Credit Bureau.

New Agency Named

Appointment of Edward H. Von Deck, 33, as general agent for the National Life Insurance Co. at Washington, succeeding Theodore W. Cook, resigned, was announced yesterday by Vice President Edward D. Field at the home office. Mr. Von Deck was cashier, agent and supervisor of the company here.

Agency Sales Up 88.8 Per Cent

First quarter new business this year of the Morgan agency of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York in Washington showed an increase of 88.8 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago, it was announced yesterday by J. Roger Hull, vice president and manager of agencies. This gain compared with a Nation-wide increase for all of the company's 77 agencies of 62.1 per cent.

Number of new policies issued by the Morgan Agency in the first three months this year was 96.3 per cent greater than in the first quarter of 1941, against an average gain for all Mutual Life agencies of 60.9 per cent.

Small Firm Seen Suffering

Banking magazine, official publication of the American Bankers Association, said yesterday the real impact of conversion from peacetime to war production has not been felt in a large number of industries, but that it "will affect thousands of small manufacturing concerns during the next few months."

The survey, prepared by William R. Kuhns, editor of the publication, predicted that these affected concerns will not immediately find other things to do with their men and machines, and added:

"They will face a difficult period of readjustment and large amounts of bank credit will be required. The effect on retail and wholesale distributors will not be immediately noticeable because we still have on hand large stocks of most of the products already under restriction or in the process of being curtailed or entirely suppressed. . . ."

Paint Sales Heavier

March sales of paint, varnish, lacquer and fillers amounted to $48,070,117, the Commerce Department says on the basis of figures from 680 manufacturers. This was an increase of $2,894 compared with February and of $7,884,822 compared with March, 1941.

New York Cotton

New York, May 4 (AP).—Cotton prices moved up today under leadership of later-month deliveries. Closing quotations were unchanged to up 40 cents a bale.

A combination of factors aided the advance, brokers said, including crop conditions in some sections, expectation of a further increase in the rate of consumption and political developments at Washington which were regarded as favorable by some.

The March, 1943, delivery paced the rise, that month getting beyond 20 cents at one time.

Olds Denies U. S. Steel Unit Willfully Broke WPB Rules

Difficult to Comply With Multitude of Orders, He Claims

By the Associated Press

Hoboken, N. J., May 4.—The United States Steel Corp., through its chairman, Irving S. Olds, today entered its first full-fledged defense against charges by the War Production Board that its subsidiaries had "deliberately" violated priorities orders, thus delaying war work.

At the same time stockholders, in their forty-first annual meeting, which came only a few hours before the Government had ordered a virtual shut-down on durable consumers' goods use of steel, learned that the principal steel producer in May had 99.1 per cent of its rolling facilities booked for orders bearing a priority of A-1-K or better.

The meeting, where 250 stockholders in this port town, across the Hudson River from Manhattan, ate their traditional repast of sandwiches, pie and milk in a dingy bank building in sight of the busy docks, passed solutions "upholding the hands of our officers" in the priorities controversy with the Government, and expressed the "sense of this meeting" that further wage increases for steel workers should be barred while there was a "ceiling on prices and income."

Both resolutions were proposed by J. Stuart Blackman, a familiar figure at corporation meetings, and were passed by voice vote. The bulk of the corporation's stock, held in proxies by the management was not voted on either proposition.

Olds told stockholders regarding charges of priority violation by the company's principal operating subsidiary:

"With the magnitude of Carnegie-Illinois's operations it would be remarkable if there had not been some instances since May 31, 1941, where strict compliance with priority orders and regulations has not taken place.

"But I can assure you the stockholders of the corporation that such instances, if any, have not been 'deliberate' and have been of relatively minor significance in comparison with Carnegie-Illinois' vast contribution toward fulfillment of the Government's defense and war production programs.

"The whole system of priorities and allocations has been a gradual evolution over many months. (The orders) have not been entirely free of ambiguity, gaps and contradictions, and a literal compliance therewith was difficult, to say the least."

Olds said Carnegie-Illinois' plate production had risen from 1,360,000 tons in 1940 to two million tons in 1941, and was currently at an annual rate of 3,600,000 tons. He said the operating subsidiary for some time past had been producing "a far larger proportion of the entire country's plate production than its proportion of the Nation's steel-making capacity."

Olds' analysis of the corporation's 1941 net profit of $116,171,075 showed these outstanding facts:

1. That the profits figure was aftr deduction of $191,500,000 of taxes, equivalent to $22 a share of common stock outstanding, and that last year's taxes were $106,000 higher than in the preceding year.

2. That the 1941 profit compared with $102,211,282 in the preceding year, when operations advanced only 80 per cent of capacity—"high rates of operation have accelerated the normal deterioration of facilities."

3. That profits last year, after all charges except interest on funded debt, were 7.02 per cent of the value of the corporation's net assets (total assets less current liabilities). This compared with earning equal to 6.99 per cent in 1940 and of 1.85 per cent in the 10-year period 1932-41.

Business Highlights

By Standard & Poor's Corp.

Metal Fabricating

Because copper and brass are so essential to the military effort, most of the nonferrous metal fabricators will have a backlog of business sufficient to keep both existing mills and those now building operating at capacity for the duration of the war. The limiting factor is the supply of copper. Despite increasing production in Latin America, subsidies for marginal domestic output, and Government-financed expansion of several domestic mines, it is unlikely that the supply of copper in 1942 will exceed by as much as 15 per cent that of 1941, when inventories all along the line were heavily drawn upon. The fabricators can thus record some gains in output but cannot expect to maintain anything like the rate of rise scored last year, even if shipping conditions improve or if copper diverted from other manufacturers far exceeds present indications.

Rail Equipment Makers

Leading railway car and locomotive builders will not lapse into idleness because the WPB has ordered a sharp curtailment of rolling stock production programs. All of these companies are busy on war work, which represents by far the greater part of their unfilled orders on a dollar basis. Furthermore, even though aggregate deliveries to the railroads will be smaller this year than had been hoped, for locomotive companies they will be somewhat larger than in 1941. In the first quarter well over 100 steam engines were shipped, compared with 206 in all of 1941. Exclusive of possible exports (lend-lease orders have been taken for 200 locomotives carrying high priorities), the WPB now promises materials for 300 additional units.

Bank Earnings

Provisions for anticipated higher taxes were mainly responsible for the lower indicated earnings of New York City banks in the first quarter of this year. Although the published figures do not reveal the amounts set aside for taxes, an examination of unusual charges in the miscellaneous reserves frequently provides an important clue. The reserves of the larger banks seems to indicate a provision for a surtax rate of 20 per cent to 25 per cent on the average. Before making allowances for tax increases, bank earnings for 1942 could easily improve by 5 per cent, despite the tendency of expenses to advance. Final net earnings will, of course, depend upon the amount of surtax required under the new law.

'Prices Going Up' Advertising Hit

Pittsburgh, May 4 (AP).—Kenneth Barnard, manager of the Chicago Better Business Bureau, asserted today that the technique of scarcity advertising "encourages hoarding and creates false shortages in products of which there is sufficient if they are distributed intelligently."

Barnard, who also is chairman of war activities of the National Association of Better Business Bureaus, told the national group's twenty-eighth annual convention at its opening session here:

"Scarce advertising which says 'buy now before prices rise' 'these can never be replaced' and 'prices going up' encourages hoarding and creates false shortages in products of which there is sufficient if they are distributed intelligently."

Representatives of 80 better business bureaus in North America are attending the convention.

Price Ceiling Set On Bed Linens

The Office of Price Administration imposed a price ceiling, at the manufacturers' level, on "back-filled" bed linen, a lightweight type widely used by modest-income groups.

The prices fixed are lower than was charged by manufacturers prior to February 2, the date at which other bed linens were brought under price control, OPA said. Since that time, no "back-filled" bed linens have moved from manufacturers' hands. Retail prices paid for such goods sold during March were based on prices retailers paid prior to February 2.

"Hence, the amendment destroys any occasion for raising prices for these textiles to retailers," the OPA announcement said. "In fact, it makes it possible for retailers to charge less than March, 1942, levels for back-filled bed linens."

Coca-Cola Net Drops in Period

Wilmington, Del., May 4 (AP).—The Coca-Cola Co., at the annual stockholders' meeting today, reported net earnings for the first quarter of 1942 of $4,199,197, compared with $5,944,784 for the same period last year.

Director voted 75 cents a share dividend on common stock and the regular semiannual dividend of $1.50 per share on class A stock, both payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 12.

Harrison Jones, vice president, was chosen chairman of the board of directors, succeeding R. W. Woodruff who was reelected chairman of the executive committee.

A. A. Acklin, president, and all other officers and directors were reelected.

Bank Loans Show Further Steep Decline

By the Associated Press

Business loans of banks continued sharply downward last week.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities dropped 145 million dollars, to a total of $6,731,000,000 in the week ended April 29. Since March 18 these loans have declined 304 million dollars.

No official reason was given for these declines, but it was attributed unofficially to a number of factors, including repayment of old defense loans, refunding of some bank loans into market securities and retirement of some consumer installment paper. Concerning this last suggestion, it was understood that the decline in installment credit forced by the Federal Reserve's own regulations has caused finance companies to reduce their debts substantially.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on April 29, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

Soap Sales Show 52.8% Increase In First Quarter

New York, May 4 (AP).—Everybody's doing a lot more scrubbing these days than is customary or else there's been some hoarding of soap.

The Association of American Soap & Glycerine Producers reported today sales of soap by manufacturers who make nine-tenths of the country's total amounted to $107,756,295 in the first quarter of 1942, an increase of 52.8 per cent over the preceding three months and 35.5 per cent more than in the first quarter of 1941. The amount was 78.1 per cent higher than the quarterly average for the 5 year period 1935-39.

The association said market studies showed wholesalers, retailers and consumers have excess quantities of soap on hand and current sales were described as "very slow."

Canned Goods Buying Centralized in Army

By the Associated Press

The Army has taken over war buying of canned fruits and vegetables for all armed services and principal Government agencies, the War Department disclosed yesterday. It predicted buying of other types of supplies soon would be similarly pooled.

The new procedure was set up under a War Production Board allocation, it was explained, to insure that all Federal agencies taking a vital part in the war effort would be able at all times to obtain the highest quality canned goods. The central buying will continue for the balance of the year.

In addition to buying for the land forces, the Army Quartermaster Corps will act as purchasing agent for the Navy, Marine Corps, Veterans and Lend-Lease Administration, and the Treasury procurement section.

Congress Is Asked To Continue FSCC

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department asked Congress yesterday to continue the life of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation indefinitely. Under the present law, the agency's authority to operate will expire June 30.

In a letter to the House, asking extension of the authority, Grover B. Hill, Acting Secretary of Agriculture, said the corporation was buying agricultural commodities for lend-lease, Red Cross and domestic purposes, and in addition was supplying some requirements of the Army and Navy.

Building Awards In South Reach Record April High

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Construction contract awards announced in April for the southern States totaled $496,651,000, a new record for one month, the Manufacturers Record announced today.

Fears that industry would be seriously affected by the War Production order restricting building were at least temporarily dispelled by the letting of numerous large contracts by the War Department the Record said.

Tremendous increases in Government-sponsored industrial, military and other projects skyrocketed the April figure to 62 million dollars ahead of the former all-time monthly peak reached in August, 1941.

The month's total was twice as much as the total for April last year and 25 per cent ahead of the figure for March.

The $1,427,710,000 total of accumulated contracts for the first four months of the year is more than twice the highest previously recorded figure for a similar period, the Record said, comparing with $661,129,000 at the same time last year.

March Exports Mount Sharply To 608 Million

By the Associated Press

Shipments of war materials and other merchandise from the United States to friendly countries jumped sharply in March, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

While the department no longer gives details on foreign trade, the March rise may have been due to increased shipments to Russia and the western Pacific area.

March shipments were evaluated at $608,570,000, compared with $478,531,000 in February, and were double those of March, 1941.

The March figures brought total exports for the first quarter of 1942 to $1,566,581,000, or 59 per cent more than in the similar period last year and also the largest first quarter total for any year since 1920.

Imports, although restricted by shipping problems, also increased slightly in March and reached $272,287,000, compared with $253,561,000 in February.

The first quarter total of imports was $779,502,000, compared with $747,158,000 in the similar period last year.

Meanwhile experts of the Board of Economic Warfare and the War Production Board are working out new administrative procedures designed to streamline the allocation of exports to other American republics, the State Department disclosed yesterday.

In making this known, the State Department said that in order to avoid undue congestion of export shipments at ports and railway terminals, consideration was being given to a plan to coordinate the issuance of export licenses with the availability of ocean freight.

The object would be to insure that the commodities most urgently needed in Latin American republics would be given preference over less essential goods.

As a further measure of inter-American cooperation the State Department, Board of Economic Warfare and War Production Board jointly announced yesterday a list of additional commodities allocated to other American republics for the second quarter f 1942.

This list supplements the allocations announced last month, and includes the following materials:

Week's Steel Rate To Dip to 98.6%

New York, May 4 (AP).—The Nation's steel mills will operate this week at 98.6 per cent of capacity, producing 1,674,800 net tons of ingots, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

That was a decrease of three-tenths of 1 per cent from last week's 98.9 per cent rate, which was equivalent to 1,679,900 net tons of steel, and compared with 98.6 per cent of 1,674,800 tons a month ago and 96.8 per cent of 1,562,200 tons a year ago.

New Steel Ban Seen Channeling 'Every Last Ounce' Into War Use

By the Associated Press

Nw York, May 4.—Steel authorities said today's sweeping new ban on use of iron and steel in civilian production would channel into war plants any of the vital metal that had been missed by previous curtailments.

"Every last ounce of steel for war," was the interpretation put on the War Production Board's order ending manufacture of iron or steel in 400 classes of civilian articles.

The quarters pointed out that while nearly all steel now was going for war, some secondary material had been permitted gadget and accessory makers.

"We understand this new list has been checked and double-checked so that no part of the arms building, Army-outfitting and naval supply industries will suffer," one authority said.

As an example of where steel is going, steel quarters pointed to the statement of Irving S. Olds, chairman of United States Steel Corp., which makes more than one-third of the Nation's total.

"For the present month of May 99.1 per cent of the total quantity of steel on Carnegie-Illinois (U. S. Steel's principal operating subsidiary) rolling schedule bears priority rating of A-1-K or better," Olds told stockholders at the annual meeting.

"The remainder is less than 15,000 tons and none of this remaining tonnage is without priority rating," Olds added.

Trade reports for weeks have told of the difficulties holders of even fairly high priority-rated orders had found in obtaining steel—there were too many gun, tank and ship builders ahead of them.

Steel sources declined to estimate the total amount to be saved for war by today's order, but said unofficially that while it was small, "every little bit helps."

50-Cent Dividend Declared by G. M.

New York, May 4 (AP).—Directors of General Motor Corporation today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock payable June 12 to holders of record May 14. A similar payment was made on last March 12.

Last year General Motors common stockholders received dividends of 75 cents in March and $1 each in June, September and December, making a total of $3.75. The corporation has about 43,150,000 common shares outstanding.

Contract Bridge

Goren (see yesterday's column) would never recommend the poor opening lead made by West against today's three-no-trump contract, but without it East would have not had an opportunity for a clever play. Thus our partners' errors may offer us a chance to be brilliant. Assume you are East: West leads his fourth-best diamond and dummy plays the jack; what card do you play, and why?

Today's Hand

Blockades an Entry

East's normal play on the jack of diamonds is the queen, but realizing that declarer probably has the ace and king of diamonds for his strong bidding, as he cannot have very much else, East sees that he can prevent declarer from running the clubs if he does not allow him to have an entry in diamonds. Therefore, in refusing to put up the diamond queen to the first trick, declarer's jack holds, but when the ace of clubs is finally forced out on the third round, there is no way to enter the North hand, and declarer can win only two clubs, three diamonds, one spade and one heart for down two. If East puts up the diamond queen on the first trick, declarer will take it and drive out the club ace, and the ten of diamonds will be the necessary entry card to cash the remaining two clubs to make nine tricks and game.

A persuasive gentleman, named James A. Farley, whom you may remember as the man who had a lot to do with convincing a great many people of the righteousness of a cause—hereinafter known as the Democratic Party—is to be heard on the radio tonight in the interest of another cause which, it's to be hoped, will be equally successful.

The former chairman of the Democratic National Committee is now the corporations committee of the USO, which is opening its drive next week to raise 32 million dollars. And tonight he'll be heard over WJSV and the Columbia network explaining the plans and purposes of that organization in setting up service clubs for Uncle Sam's armed forces throughout the world.

Mr. Farley's appeal will be part of the program called "Report to the Nation," which you hear regularly over C. B. S. at 9:30 every Tuesday night. Tonight, oddly enough, "Report" is to be devoted to telling you of the good work being done by the USO, which has already established something like 600 clubs in the service camps and expects to have fully 900 before 1942 has come to a close.

USO also maintains mobile units—100 in service at the moment—and they travel many miles a day, taking books, cigarettes, movies and what have you to the men serving with isolated detachments. Script Writer Harold Isaacs made a trip to Norfolk, Va., from Washington, with one of these units and will describe in his dramatic prose how they function.

Friede Plan Approval Adds To Confusion

The confusion in the Landis-Friede controversy over the District Civilian Defense communications system was increased yesterday when the Coordinator's Policy Committee gave ex-officio approval of the Friede plan, and the Third Corps Defense Area Headquarters in Baltimore assigned Maj. D. W. Paulett to the District to investigate the communications system.

Although there had been dissention in the local defense ranks over the central control program developed by Communications Chief Herbert A. Friede, the issue did not become public until last week when National OCD Chief James M. Landis filed a report on Friede's organization with United States Coordinator John Russell Young.

Decentralization Urged

Landis charged that had the last trial blackout been an actual air-raid, "incalculable loss of life would have resulted" if Friede's centralized communications system had been in effect. He advocated a breakdown into at least four subcontrol centers, functioning under a comptroller, who should be selected for executive rather than technical qualifications.

Two days later Friede retorted that if Landis' decentralized communications system were to be adopted "chaos and confusion" would ensue.

Young, acting as coordinator, called a meeting of the defense policy meeting for last Friday—but it was postponed until yesterday when it was discovered that members of the committee had not been notified of the meeting.

Will Meet Again

Officially, yesterday's meeting brought forth only a decision to have another meeting which representatives of the War Department, the telephone company, the Atlantic Telegraph & Telephone Co., and the OCD will be asked to attend.

The policy committee, which has never considered either the Landis or the Friede report, was asked to do so and to give recommendations at this next meeting, of which the date has not yet been determined.

Although the members of the policy committee—Friede, Police Chief Edward Kelly, Fire Chief Stephen Porter, Assistant Engineer Commissioner Beverly C. Snow and Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst—have not as a body considered the dissenting documents, they have all given them individual attention, and the personal feeling expressed at the meeting was that the committee would support Friede.

Army Supports Landis

Maj. Paulett, who was here two weeks ago on an inspection of the local civilian defense organization, was reported yesterday to have been assigned here as acting comptroller. If true, this would indicate that the Army is throwing its weight on the Landis side, since it would have been instituting an office in the local picture to which Friede had voiced his opposition, and would, according to the OCD manual, place Paulett above Friede.

Civilian Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles, however, denied that Paulette had been given any particular rank, and said that he would not be until he arrived.

Still Greater Staggering of Hours Is Urged

Further staggering of Government and commercial working hours and of school hours was being urged last night following an announcement by the Capital Transit Co. of the purchase of 400 new buses and 100 new street cars.

Dean J. Locke, vice president of the Transit Company, said that each new temporary building that was opened should have hours staggered in relation to those around it, so as to eliminate the necessity of additional transportation service for its workers.

He said the company had not ceased its campaign to have internal staggering Federal departments' hours, which the War Department has promised him to institute in its new building in Arlington.

Although the Budget Bureau, which dictates the working time of the Federal agencies, had said some weeks ago that internal staggering was not practical, since each department must work as a "cohesive unit," an official said yesterday that the bureau acted in this case as a liaison, rather than as an administrative office. If the District Traffice Department and the heads of the Federal agencies agreed upon the internal staggering, the Budget Bureau would not stand in the way, it was indicated.

Meanwhile, the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co., added its vote for further staggering. Its recommendations included spreading arrival times of every kind of workers from 7 to 9:30 a. m., departure from 3:30 to 6, and would even open schools at 9:45 and 10 o'clock. These proposals were endorsed by Tranffic Director William A. Van Duzer and by the American Automobile Association.

574 Will Get Ensigns' Rank At Rites Today

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 4.—Commissioning exercises for the first 1942 naval reserve midshipmen's school will be held tomorrow at the United States Naval Academy.

Survivors of an original group of 696 reservists who remained at the Naval Academy following a 30-day preliminary training period, 574 young men will receive ensign commissions in the naval reserve during the ceremonies in Dahlgren Hall.

Commissions will be presented at 10:30 a. m. by Vice Admiral S. M. Robinson, the Navy's director of procurement and material. Admiral Robinson and Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, academy superintendent, will address the reservists during the exercises.

Admiral Beardhall will administer the oath of office after the commissions have been presented. The program does not list a dress parade.

Today the reservists rehearsed the commissioning program and tonight attended a farewell dance. All will be assigned to active duty immediately after receiving commissions.

During four months training at the academy, the reservists, composed of college graduates from all parts of the country, received intensive instruction in marine and electrical engineering. They also abided by the same rules and discipline required of regular midshipmen and lived in Bancroft Hall, the midshipmen's dormitory.

At the academy they were organized as a separate battalion under the supervision of Lieut. Comdr. P. L. High, U. S. N.

Reserve Midshipmen Edward P. Taft, jr., of Augusta, Ga., command the reserve battalion

D. C. 'Share-Your-Car' Meeting To Be Model for Rest of U. S.

Washington's mass meeting for the "Share Your Car" campaign has been adopted as a national model, and similar meetings will be held under Federal direction all over the country, the Department of Vehicles and Traffic announced last night.

The first of the coast-to-coast series called by the Office of Price Administration and the Office of Defense Transportation will be held May 11 in Boston.

Automobile and truck owners in the Washington metropolitan area are urged by United States Defense Coordinator John Russell Young to attend Thursday's rally, to be held at 7:30 p. m. in the Departmental Auditorium, on Constitution Avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, will preside.

A motion picture, "Keep 'Em Rolling," will show the difference between driving habits which waste gasoline and tires, and those which help to conserve them.

Federal and municipal department heads will meet this morning at 11 o'clock in Conference Room 210 in the Department of Agriculture Administration Building to discuss the methods of operating and promoting the "Share Your Car" movement which have been worked out by Agriculture personnel officers, the first to respond to an appeal from Young several weeks ago.

How About Tires?

Clean-Up Campaign Declared a Success

The "Clean Up for Victory Week" which has been concluded under the sponsorship of the Junior Board of Commerce, had a decisive effect on the volume of salvaged materials, according to James E. Colliflower, general chairman of the District of Columbia Salvage Committee.

The "Clean Up for Victory Week" was also sponsored by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. It was pointed out that this official "Clean Up for Victory Week" will be the last week of its kind for the duration in the City of Washington but that in the interest of conservation and also in connection with the "Salvage for Victory" program, the citizens are requested by the Commissioners to make the effort a continuing day to day, week to week and month to month program throughout the war.

It is believed that the committee headed by James W. Jones, chairman; William Sardo, vice chairman, and Irvin Klaus, publicity, together with the members of the Junior Board of Commerce was responsible for the definite success of the drive.

The Washington Industrial Union Council last night adopted a resolution commending President Roosevelt's seven-point national economy policy. Art and Charity Left Fortune By Mrs. Whitney

New York, May 4 (AP).—Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, the late sculptress and one of the nation's wealthiest women, left a cash bequest of $2,500,000 to the Whitney Museum of Art which she founded in 1931. Her will was filed for probate today in Surrogate's Court.

The will stated that the entire residue of the estate had been left for charity in a trust to be administered by her three children, Maj. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, board chairman of Pan American Airways, and Mrs. Barklie McKee Henry of New York and Mrs. G. MacCulloch Miller of New York and Aiken, S. C.

One of the two pearl necklaces which Mrs. Whitney said in her will that she "almost always wore" was left to her niece, Gloria Vanderbilt, now Mrs. Pat Di Cicco. In addition, Mrs. Di Cicco received a collection of trophies and other mementoes of her father, the late Reginald Vanderbilt.

Nazis Slaughter 72 Dutch Patriots

London, May 4 (BB).—Execution of 72 Dutch patriots as leaders of an anti-Nazi "secret organization" aiding Germany's foes was announced tonight by the Reich conquerors of Holland. Seven others were consigned to life imprisonment.

Evidently including several former Dutch army officers, the 79 Netherlanders shot or imprisoned were charged before a German court martial of leading an underground nation-wide network of revolt against the Nazis and of "attempting to contact Germany's opponents," the German-operated Dutch radio announced.
